CLASSIFIED ANNEX AND COMMITTEE INTENT

The classified annex to this report includes the classified Schedule of Authorizations and its associated explanatory language. The Committee views the classified annex as an integral part of this legislation. The classified annex contains a thorough discussion of the issues considered by the Committee underlying the funding authorizations found in the classified Schedule of Authorizations. The Committee intends that all intelligence programs discussed in the classified annex to this report be conducted in accordance with the guidance and limitations set forth as associated language therein.

The classified Schedule of Authorizations is incorporated directly into this legislation by virtue of Section 102 of the bill. The classified annex is available for review by all members of the House of Representatives, subject to the requirements of clause 13 of Rule XXIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, and Rule 14 of the Rules of Procedure for the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. In addition, Section 356 of the bill incorporates reporting requirements of the Classified Annex and any Joint Explanatory Statement into the Act.

SCOPE OF COMMITTEE REVIEW

The bill authorizes U.S. intelligence and intelligence-related activities under the jurisdiction of the Committee, including the National Intelligence Program (NIP), the Military Intelligence Program (MIP), and the Information System Security Program (ISSP). The NIP consists of all activities of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence and the Central Intelligence Agency, as well as intelligence and intelligence-related activities conducted by: (1) the Department of Defense; (2) the Defense Intelligence Agency; (3) the National Security Agency; (4) the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force; (5) the Coast Guard; (6) the Department of State; (7) the Department of the Treasury; (8) the Department of Energy; (9) the Department of Justice; (10) the Federal Bureau of Investigation; (11) the Drug Enforcement Administration; (12) the National Reconnaissance Office; (13) the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency; and (14) the Department of Homeland Security. With respect to clause 3(c) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives and section 308(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, this legislation does not include any new spending or credit authority, nor does it provide for any increase or decrease in tax revenues or expenditures. The bill does, however, authorize appropriations.

Other fiscal features of this legislation are addressed in the estimate prepared by the Committee under clause 3(d)(2) of Rule XIII of the rules of the House of Representatives.

GENERAL PERFORMANCE GOALS AND OBJECTIVES

With respect to clause 3(c)(4) of rule XIII of the Rules of the House of Representatives, this legislation would address several general and outcome-related performance goals and objectives. COMMITTEE STATEMENT AND VIEWS

A. OVERVIEW

In drafting the fiscal year 2010 Intelligence Authorization Act, the Committee sought to adopt legislative measures and authorize funding that would address the country's most pressing threats and improve national security. The Committee applauds the extraordinary efforts that the brave women and men of the Intelligence Community have put forth to protect our nation, but recognizes that there is still a great deal of work still to be done. To that end, H.R. 2701 provides the Intelligence Community with the necessary funding and intelligence authorities to continue this important work and simultaneously establishes critical oversight mechanisms to ensure that these funds are expended and these authorities are exercised in an effective, efficient, and responsible manner.

The bill includes specific provisions that will assist the Intelligence Community in its efforts to continue the fight against al-Qa'ida where they have established strongholds, to address concerns from emerging trouble spots such as Yemen and Somalia, and to confront global challenges posed by such threats as weapons of mass destruction. The Committee has also included provisions to improve accountability and oversight by creating an Intelligence Community Inspector General and by establishing reporting requirements needed to assess the Intelligence Community's progress in closing critical intelligence gaps and making important internal reforms.

As always, the Committee seeks to authorize the funds necessary to enable the Intelligence Community to carry out its mission while ensuring that the Congress and the courts are able to exercise their constitutional responsibility to conduct effective oversight on behalf of all Americans.

B. THE COMMITTEE REVIEW

The Committee completed its review of the President's fiscal year 2010 budget request, carrying out its annual responsibility to prepare an authorization based on close examination of the U.S. Government's intelligence programs and proposed expenditures.

Over the past two months, the Committee conducted 11 full committee-level budget hearings and briefings on numerous topics, including the following:

- National Intelligence Program
- Military Intelligence Program
- Signals Intelligence
- Overhead Architecture
- Human Intelligence
- Covert Action
- Human Capital
- Cybersecurity

In addition to these events, Committee members and staff have taken numerous budget-related briefings covering all intelligence programs within the National Intelligence Program, the Military Intelligence Program, and the Information System Security Program.

As always, the Committee's legislative and budgetary actions are based on more than these budget-specific hearings and briefings. The actions taken in this legislation are the result of the Committee's ongoing, rigorous oversight of the U.S. Intelligence Community throughout the year. This oversight activity includes scores of Committee and Subcommittee hearings and briefings; site visits and fact-finding trips; reviews of congressionally directed reports; and studies of intelligence capabilities, strategies, plans, and challenges.

C. THE LEGISLATION

The bill and accompanying classified Schedule of Authorizations includes the Committee's recommended authorizations for the Intelligence Community for fiscal year 2010 and includes authorizations for the intelligence portion of the funding for overseas contingency operations for fiscal year 2010. The legislative provisions in H.R. 2701 will enhance U.S. intelligence capabilities in several important respects.

First, the bill invests in human resources by building upon the Committee's longstanding commitment to improving language capabilities and increasing diversity in the Intelligence Community. The bill adds funding and establishes new reporting requirements designed to provide the Committee with the information it needs to assess the Intelligence Community's progress toward critical personnel goals. In an effort to encourage critical language acquisition, the bill authorizes the expansion of the Boren Fellowship program to include five high-priority African languages, and also makes permanent the Pat Roberts Intelligence Scholars Program, which provides stipends to college students studying critical languages and other subjects important to the Intelligence Community. The bill further requires the Director of National Intelligence (DNI) to develop a plan to increase diversity within the Intelligence Community.

The bill mandates implementation of security clearance reform to allow first- and second-generation Americans, many of whom may have critical language skills, to serve in the Intelligence Community with proper clearances. The Committee is concerned that there are no effective methods of measuring the quality of the security clearance process. In the absence of such measures, there are no guarantees that the system is functioning effectively, by granting trustworthy people access to classified information and preventing others from having those accesses. In addition, the delay in granting clearances frequently costs the Intelligence Community qualified applicants.

Second, the bill enhances congressional oversight by ensuring that the Committee receives the information it needs to conduct its inherent oversight function. The National Security Act of 1947 mandates that the Committee be “fully and currently informed” of all intelligence activities. Over the past several years, the executive branch has failed to meet that standard in a number of important cases. These failures prompted the Committee to adopt language to enhance reporting on intelligence activities to the full membership of the congressional intelligence committees.

One particular provision would repeal the so-called “Gang of Eight” provision, which has allowed the executive branch to limit notification on certain covert actions to only the chairmen and ranking members of the congressional intelligence committees. The new provision in H.R. 2701 would only allow the President to limit briefings pursuant to written procedures established by the congressional intelligence committees and allows the Committee to set procedures for the receipt of such notifications.

The bill also strengthens the oversight mechanisms available to the Committee. It would create a statutory and independent Intelligence Community-wide Inspector General with a clearly-defined responsibility to report directly to Congress. A separate provision clarifies the DNI’s obligation to cooperate with GAO investigations requested by the congressional intelligence committees to ensure that those committees will benefit from GAO’s skilled personnel and thorough, objective analysis.

In furtherance of the President’s emphasis on protecting government information systems, the bill also makes a sizeable investment in foundational cybersecurity capabilities.

Finally, the legislation authorizes funding to enhance human intelligence collection and provides critical funds for traditional intelligence challenges and other enduring and emerging global security issues in Asia, Africa, and Latin America.

D. AREAS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

The way forward in Afghanistan and Pakistan

It is beyond dispute that the security of Afghanistan and Pakistan is inextricably linked to the security of the United States and its allies. The Committee notes with increasing concern that both the political and military situations in these countries continue to deteriorate.

After an eight-year presence of U.S. military and Coalition Forces in the region, al-Qa'ida, Taliban, and other affiliated groups continue to enjoy a safe haven in Pakistan's Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FATA) from which they are able to plan and operate undeterred and with impunity. The Taliban has been able to regroup and gain more ground in Afghanistan, thereby posing a real challenge to the stability of the national government. The opium trade is booming, providing funding for the Taliban's illicit activities and attacks on Coalition forces. Citizens still lack the basic facilities they expect from their government, such as transportation and communications infrastructure, education, and health care.

On the other side of the border in Pakistan, the situation is equally dire. The significance of the threat posed by the Pakistani Taliban, al-Qa'ida, and their affiliates to Pakistan, a nuclear-armed ally, cannot be overstated. The Pakistani Taliban has shown its strength in critical regions of the country, not only in the minimally-governed FATA, but also in the settled areas such as Peshawar and the Swat Valley. They have conducted suicide attacks against Pakistani and Western interests, including the attack against the Marriot Hotel in Islamabad, the murder of former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, and the obstruction of U.S. and Coalition supply routes to Afghanistan. More recently, the Pakistani Taliban has made brazen attempts to expand its authority into areas dangerously close to Islamabad. While the democratically-elected government has recently taken military action against the Pakistani Taliban, the government will be relatively weak and unable to repel these threats without U.S. assistance.

The Committee applauds the Administration's efforts to reemphasize the significance of these two nations and to approach the region with a new strategic vision. The Committee agrees that the United States must devote more resources, both financial and human, and use all instruments of power to overcome these challenges.

The Director of National Intelligence has briefed the Committee on the Intelligence Community's plans to adjust its strategy to match the situation on the ground. The Committee will continue to monitor developments as they relate to this region and will work diligently to ensure that the Intelligence Community has the resources and support required to carry out its mission.

Cybersecurity

Shortly after inauguration, the President ordered a 60-day review to develop a strategic framework for ensuring that all the various efforts to protect government information systems are fully integrated, properly resourced, and coordinated with Congress and the private sector.

In May 2009, the White House presented the results of that review. This review provides a meaningful roadmap for improving cybersecurity in the future and outlines some of the challenges the nation will face in building a robust cybersecurity capability.

Unfortunately, the national security establishment has come late to this issue. The Committee recognizes a need for a comprehensive effort on cybersecurity and appreciates the gravity and proximity of the cyber threat. The difficulty, as always, is in the details. As we move forward, there are critical oversight issues, difficult funding decisions, and thorny technical and policy questions still to be resolved. In some cases, those technical and policy questions may have to be resolved before the Committee has gathered enough information to be comfortable with authorizing significant sums for loosely defined purposes.

Several standards will guide the Committee's oversight in the near-term:

- Funding for cybersecurity programs may need to be reduced or slowed until the future direction for cybersecurity is better defined.
- Any cybersecurity strategy or plans should include clear goals and metrics to enhance program and congressional oversight.
- There needs to be a clear doctrine for the use of offensive cyber capabilities.
- Securing government information systems should include efforts beyond building bigger and better firewalls, such as improving the capability to attribute attacks to specific government or private actors.
- Expansion of cybersecurity authorities and capabilities must include stronger oversight mechanisms to ensure that any monitoring is conducted in a manner consistent with laws and regulations.
- Securing government information systems will require both a significant increase in the number of cybersecurity experts in government service and a cultural change in the way federal employees approach computer and information security.

The Committee will continue to monitor this area closely and looks forward to cooperating with the Administration in its efforts. The Committee will be prepared to authorize the expenditure of funds where those expenditures appear necessary and will offer legislation when there is a need for new authorities or greater oversight.

Diversity in the Intelligence Community

The Committee has long been concerned about the lack of diversity in the Intelligence Community. Despite efforts to improve the diversity of its workforce, intelligence agencies continue to lag behind the rest of the federal workforce in this area.

Diversity in the Intelligence Community is an operational imperative. For our intelligence apparatus to operate clandestinely throughout the world, the Intelligence Community needs officers of differing ethnicities. Diversity can improve our operational capabilities and, thereby, increase the quality and quantity of the intelligence our officers are able to collect.

In order to achieve this operational objective, the Intelligence Community must adopt measures of diversity that match its mission requirements. Currently, in measuring diversity, intelligence agencies use only the six Office of Management and Budget-approved categories for identifying race and national origin. These are limited to: (1) Hispanic or Latino, (2) American Indian or Alaska Native, (3) Asian, (4) Black or African-American, (5) Native Hawaiian or Other Pacific Islander, and (6) White. These categories were created to prevent discriminatory employment and education practices, not to measure the foreign language skills and cultural knowledge the Intelligence Community needs to succeed.

While it is important that the Intelligence Community have a workforce that reflects the American population, it is far more important that its workforce be capable of operating in, collecting information about, and analyzing developments in all parts of the world. If the Intelligence Community is to succeed in its global mission, it must have a global face.

The Committee is, however, encouraged by the proposal of a new form for self-identification of ancestry, ethnicity, and cultural expertise. The form was made available for public comment on May 11, 2009. This is a good first step toward improving mission-oriented diversity, and the Committee looks forward to reviewing public comments.

Improving foreign language proficiency and management

Expert foreign language capability is critical to effective intelligence collection and analysis. The Committee is encouraged that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has launched an initiative to double the number of employees with critical foreign language skills and looks forward to evaluating the fruits of that initiative in coming years.

While the Intelligence Community has made significant strides in hiring personnel who have limited proficiency in a foreign language, the Committee believes that the Intelligence Community must intensify efforts to train these personnel to a higher level of professional proficiency. This degree of language expertise generally requires a substantial commitment of time and resources, but the Committee is convinced that serious, extended foreign language study will yield substantial benefits for the Intelligence Community. In particular, the Committee recommends that programs for overseas immersion language training be expanded.

Currently, many agencies evaluate foreign language capabilities by tallying the number of filled billets that are categorized as “foreign language required” or “foreign language desired.” This method of accounting does not distinguish between the varied levels of foreign language proficiency. In effect, the mechanism distorts the agency’s assessment of foreign language readiness, which, in turn, adversely affects the agency’s ability to accurately evaluate its foreign language needs, plan its hiring strategies, or implement necessary training programs.

In order to better inform agency foreign language plans, the Committee urges the Intelligence Community to adopt a more precise mechanism to measure the foreign language capabilities of individual agencies, preferably one that takes into account language proficiency levels.

Intelligence cooperation with Mexico and Latin America

The Committee notes that Latin America has not received attention from the Intelligence Community commensurate with the region's importance to U.S. national security. As a result, intelligence agencies are hard-pressed to provide needed insights about the complex threats emanating from the Western Hemisphere, including a brutal narcotics trade and the proliferation of violent youth gangs that have moved into American cities beyond the Southwest border region.

The Committee considers the recent announcement of the National Southwest Border Counternarcotics Strategy to be a positive indicator of the Administration's dedication to meet these hemispheric challenges head-on. In formulating specifics for the future course of this initiative, the Committee recommends that the Intelligence Community modify its approach to the region in the following ways.

First and foremost, the Committee recommends greater collaboration among the elements of the Intelligence Community. In particular, the Department of Homeland Security Intelligence and Analysis Division (DHS I&A) must do a better job of filtering and disseminating the unique intelligence that it draws from its operations on the U.S. borders and from state, local, and tribal resources. The Committee is pleased that DHS I&A plans to deploy at least one full-time employee to each of the 70 Fusion Centers operating throughout the country.

Additionally, the Intelligence Community should harness the expertise of the growing number of Hispanic-Americans, many of whom have strong cultural and linguistic ties to the region, including proficiency in regional dialects. To this end, the Committee encourages the Intelligence Community to intensify its multipronged efforts to attract Hispanics and other minorities to its ranks. For hard target countries in the region, such as Cuba, the Committee urges the Intelligence Community to tailor recruiting drives to attract exiles from those countries, just as the United States has done with Iraqi-Americans in seeking to meet intelligence objectives in Iraq.

Finally, the Committee encourages the Intelligence Community to strengthen its relationships in Latin America, particularly with the Mexican government. Mexico is confronting powerful drug cartels that have used billions of dollars from drug sales in the United States to bribe officials and arm themselves with American-purchased weaponry. This is a shared problem for which the United States and Mexico must both shoulder the responsibility of finding a solution.

Emerging terrorist safehavens

In its role as both the overseer of the Intelligence Community and a consumer of intelligence, the Committee seeks to identify those areas of the world in which future threats lie in order to provide resources and funding to meet those threats. In that regard, the Committee is concerned with the threat of increasing instability in Yemen and the continuing turmoil in Somalia. History has demonstrated that al-Qa'ida and its affiliates seek out those countries with either a weak central government or significant instability to use as safehavens from which to plot against the United States or U.S. interests abroad. While al-Qa'ida's main safehaven along the border of Afghanistan and Pakistan is of gravest concern, it is essential that neither Somalia nor Yemen become the next safehaven for al-Qa'ida.

Somalia has not had an effective national government since 1991. While certain areas of the country have developed internationally unrecognized governments, much of Somalia, including Mogadishu, remains largely lawless despite international efforts. Today, the terrorist group "al-Shabaab," which has issued statements praising Osama bin Laden and associating themselves with al-Qa'ida's global ideology, is making strides towards taking control of Mogadishu and southern Somalia. Al-Shabaab's control over this territory, including its ports, could provide al-Qa'ida a safehaven from which to plan terrorist attacks.

In 2000, Yemen was the site of the attack on the USS Cole, an al-Qa'ida strike against the United States that killed 17 U.S. servicemen. Following al-Qa'ida's attacks against the United States on September 11, 2001, the Yemeni government took some effective steps against terrorism, but in recent months the threat has grown again, as exemplified by the September 2008 al-Qa'ida attack against the U.S. Embassy in Sanaa, which killed 16 civilians. Since then, al-Qa'ida elements in Saudi Arabia and Yemen merged to become "Al-Qa'ida in the Arabian Peninsula" (AQAP) and are believed to be gaining strength in Yemen. Concurrently, the al-Houthi revolt in the north and unrest in the south of Yemen threaten the central government and may divert its attention from eliminating the AQAP threat. AQAP is now using the conflicts in the north and south as a rallying cry to recruit more terrorists into its ranks.

The Committee urges the Intelligence Community, and the Administration as a whole, to take immediate steps to address the situations in Somalia and Yemen. The Committee looks forward to supporting the Intelligence Community in these efforts.

Oversight of intelligence activities

The Committee notes with concern the blurred distinction between the intelligence-gathering activities carried out by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the clandestine operations of the Department of Defense (DOD). Congress chartered the Committee for the purpose of conducting oversight of all intelligence activities of the U.S. Government, including all programs funded under both the National Intelligence Program and the Military Intelligence Program.

In categorizing its clandestine activities, DOD frequently labels them as "Operational Preparation of the Environment" (OPE) to distinguish particular operations as traditional military activities and not as intelligence functions. The Committee observes, though, that overuse of this term has made the distinction all but meaningless. The determination as to whether an operation will be categorized as an intelligence activity is made on a case-by-case basis; there are no clear guidelines or principles for making consistent determinations. The Director of National Intelligence himself has acknowledged that there is no bright line between traditional intelligence missions carried out by the military and the operations of the CIA.

Clandestine military intelligence-gathering operations, even those legitimately recognized as OPE, carry the same diplomatic and national security risks as traditional intelligence-gathering activities. While the purpose of many such operations is to gather intelligence, DOD has shown a propensity to apply the OPE label where the slightest nexus of a theoretical, distant military operation might one day exist. Consequently, these activities often escape the scrutiny of the intelligence committees, and the congressional defense committees cannot be expected to exercise oversight outside of their jurisdiction.

Based on recent discussions, the Committee is hopeful that DOD will be more fulsome in its reporting. In the future, if DOD does not meet its obligations to inform the Committee of intelligence activities, the Committee will consider legislative action clarifying the Department's obligation to do so.

By voice vote, the Committee adopted a motion by the Chairman to favorably report the bill to the House, as amended, including by reference the classified Schedule of Authorizations.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS AND EXPLANATION OF THE AMENDMENT

TITLE I—INTELLIGENCE ACTIVITIES

Section 101. Authorization of appropriations

Section 101 lists the United States Government departments, agencies, and other elements for which the Act authorizes appropriations for intelligence and intelligence-related activities for fiscal year 2010.

Section 102. Classified schedule of authorizations

Section 102 makes clear that the details of the amounts authorized to be appropriated for intelligence and intelligence-related activities covered under this title for fiscal year 2010 are contained in a classified Schedule of Authorizations. Section 102 states that the Schedule of Authorizations shall be made available to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and to the President.

Section 103. Personnel ceiling adjustments

Section 103 allows the Director of National Intelligence (DNI), with the approval of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), to authorize employment of civilian personnel in excess of the number authorized under Section 102 by an amount not to exceed three percent of the total limit applicable to each element of the Intelligence Community. The DNI must determine that the action is necessary to the performance of important intelligence functions and must notify the congressional intelligence committees prior to the exercise of authority under this section.

Section 104. Intelligence Community Management Account

Section 104 authorizes the sum of $672,812,000 in fiscal year 2010 for the Intelligence Community Management Account of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI). The Section authorizes 853 full-time, or full-time equivalent, personnel for the Intelligence Community Management Account, who may be either permanent employees of the ODNI or individuals detailed from other elements of the United States Government. Section 104 also authorizes additional funds and personnel in the classified Schedule of Authorizations for the Intelligence Community Management Account.

Section 105. Prohibition on earmarks

Section 105 prohibits the inclusion of any earmarked funding requests in this bill.

Section 106. Restriction on conduct of intelligence activities

Section 106 states that authorization of appropriations for an activity does not grant authorization for any intelligence activity that is not otherwise permitted under the Constitution or laws of the United States.

TITLE II—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY RETIREMENT AND DISABILITY SYSTEM

Section 201. Authorization of appropriations

Section 201 authorizes appropriations in the amount of $290,900,000 for fiscal year 2010 for the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability Fund.

TITLE III—GENERAL INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY MATTERS

SUBTITLE A—PERSONNEL MATTERS

Section 301. Increase in employee compensation and benefits authorized by law

Section 301 provides that funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act for salary, pay, retirement, and other benefits for federal employees may be increased by such additional or supplemental amounts as may be necessary for increases in compensation or benefits authorized by law.

Section 302. Temporary appointment to fill vacancies in presidentially-appointed and Senate-confirmed positions in the Office of the Director of National Intelligence Section 302 allows the DNI to fill, in an acting capacity, presidentially-appointed, Senate-confirmed positions at the ODNI with either the deputy to the vacant position or another Senate-confirmed individual serving elsewhere in the Intelligence Community. A significant number of ODNI personnel are detailed from other elements of the Intelligence Community, and thus may be ineligible under the Vacancies Act to serve in an acting capacity in Senate-confirmed ODNI positions. This section helps avoid the potentially prolonged vacancies in critical positions that could result from the appointment and confirmation process by allowing the President to appoint individuals from other elements of the Intelligence Community with the necessary skills and background to serve in an acting capacity.

Section 303. Enhanced flexibility in non-reimbursable details to elements of the Intelligence Community

Section 303 expands from one year to two years the maximum length of time that U.S. Government personnel may be detailed to the ODNI on a reimbursable or non-reimbursable basis. To utilize this authority, the agreement of both the DNI and the head of the detailing element is required.

The DNI requested authority to expand the permitted duration of details from one year to three years. The Committee believes that a two-year detail strikes the appropriate balance between the needs of the ODNI and the needs of the other elements of the Intelligence Community.

Section 304. Provisions relating to the Defense Civilian Intelligence Personnel System

Section 304 curtails implementation of the Defense Civilian Intelligence Personnel System (DCIPS) by prohibiting the transition or hiring of any new employees into the system. It also requires the Secretary of Defense, within one year of enactment, to terminate the program and transition employees back to the civilian compensation system that was in effect on September 30, 2007. The provisions requiring the return of employees to the previous compensation system do not apply to members of the Defense Intelligence Senior Executive Service or to an individual in an Intelligence Senior Level position, as defined by Section 1607 of Title 10, Chapter 83.

If the Secretary of Defense, in conjunction with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, determines that the DCIPS pay system should not be terminated with respect to covered employees, he is required to provide to Congress, within six months of enactment, a written report with the Secretary's views and his reasons therefore.

The Committee, together with the Committee on Armed Services, has expressed its concern about the implementation of the DCIPS pay system. DCIPS would do away with the existing General Schedule-pay scale and replace it with a system of pay bands. This pay-banded system has been misleadingly named "pay-for-performance."

For the past three years, the Committee has expressed concerns that this compensation system lacks transparency and accountability, and could have an adverse impact on minorities. The Committee is also concerned that the system was developed without sufficient consultation with employees in the Intelligence Community. Further, the pay system is being implemented across the Intelligence Community without regard to the needs of different career fields or mission needs of the various intelligence agencies. In 2003, the Committee objected to the implementation of a similar program at the Central Intelligence Agency out of concern that it would have an undesirable impact on the workforce.

The Committee continues to be concerned that the implementation of such a system has been rushed and that there has not been adequate time to ensure managers are properly trained. Human resources personnel have raised concerns that they will not have sufficient time prior to implementation to ensure all employees receive training, nor do they have final policy guidance. Recent training events have demonstrated that managers need more practice and guidance in determining performance objectives under the systems.

The Committee supports the idea of rewarding performance and believes that the performance bonus system has not been effectively utilized. Certainly, the existing civil service system has flaws and needs reform. The Committee notes that the Director of the Office of Personnel Management has indicated his intent to reform the civilian personnel system across the entire federal government. The Committee believes that additional employees should not transition to pay-for-performance systems prior to the implementation of a broader, government-wide pay reform.

SUBTITLE B—EDUCATION

Section 311. Permanent authorization for the Pat Roberts Intelligence Scholars Program

Section 311 provides permanent authorization for the Pat Roberts Intelligence Scholars Program (PRISP), which provides financial assistance to students who pursue studies in critical language specialties, area studies, and technical and scientific specialties. PRISP was originally authorized as a pilot program in Section 318 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 2004 and has continued under year-to-year appropriations. The program has been successful and is widely supported within the Intelligence Community.

Section 312. Intelligence Officer Training Program

Section 312 authorizes the Intelligence Officer Training Program (IOTP), a program operated by the ODNI and built from a combination of previously authorized pilot programs. The IOTP seeks to recruit, prepare, and retain an ethnically and culturally diverse workforce in the Intelligence Community by providing grants to institutions of higher learning to develop courses of study in education disciplines that the DNI deems to be of critical importance to the intelligence mission. The Committee encourages the ODNI to consider awarding grants to institutions developing innovative methods for teaching high-priority foreign language skills, such as those that utilize individualized and/or web-based courses of study.

Section 313. Modifications to the Stokes Educational Scholarship Program

Section 313 expands and strengthens the Stokes Educational Scholarship Program. The Stokes Program was originally created for the National Security Agency (NSA) to help undergraduate students, particularly minority students, develop critical skills necessary to the Intelligence Community. This provision extends the program to include graduate students. It would also make the program available to other elements within the Intelligence Community.

Section 314. Pilot program for intensive language instruction in African languages

Section 314 directs the DNI to establish a pilot program to expand the National Security Education Program/Boren Scholars Program to include intensive language instruction for five high-priority African languages. The program will utilize intensive immersion instruction both in the United States and abroad, and will likely focus on the Somali, Hausa, Amharic, Tigrinya, and Kituba languages. The intent of the program is to begin building capability in African languages spoken in areas where U.S. national security interests may be affected, but where insufficient instructional capability exists in the United States.

SUBTITLE C—CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT OF COVERT ACTIONS

Section 321. Reporting on covert actions

Section 321 changes the processes for reporting of intelligence activities, including covert actions, to the congressional intelligence committees.

Title V of the National Security Act of 1947 requires the President to ensure that the congressional intelligence committees are kept fully and currently informed of intelligence activities. Section 503 of the National Security Act enumerates specific procedures with respect to briefings on covert actions.

In the past, the Committee has struggled with the limitations imposed by the executive branch on reporting of intelligence activities. To address this problem, subsection (a) amends Section 501(a) of the National Security Act by explicitly requiring the President to brief the congressional intelligence committees on legal authorities, operational risks, resource concerns, and potential for failure at issue with respect to significant, anticipated, or ongoing intelligence activities.

Subsection (b) amends Section 501(c) of the National Security Act by requiring that the procedures governing the briefings must be in writing.

Subsection (c) amends Section 502 of the National Security Act by providing explicit guidance on how the President should brief the intelligence committees on legal issues related to intelligence activities.

Subsection (d) amends Section 503 of the National Security Act by applying the same explicit guidance in subsection (c) to briefings on covert actions. This subsection also replaces Section 503(c)(2), which allowed the President to limit reports on covert actions to the so-called “Gang of Eight”—the chairmen and ranking members of the intelligence committees, the Speaker and Minority Leader of the House of Representatives, and the majority and minority leaders of the Senate—if the President determines that extraordinary circumstances affecting vital interests of the United States warrant limiting access.

This subsection replaces Section 503(c)(2) with a provision that requires the President to brief all members of the congressional intelligence committees, but implicitly provides for the possibility of more restricted briefings pursuant to the written procedures established by the congressional intelligence committees, pursuant to the revised Section 501(c). This language vests the authority to limit the briefings with the committees, rather than the President. Also, in defining the term “significant undertaking,” the subsection explicitly establishes certain conditions under which the President is required to provide information on a covert action program to the congressional intelligence committees.

This subsection further provides that, if a briefing on a finding or notice is restricted to certain members of the committees, the President shall provide those members with general information on the content of the finding or notice. It also allows any member of Congress to whom a covert action finding or notice has been reported to submit to the DNI an objection concerning any part of that finding or notice, who must report that objection to the President in writing within 48 hours.

Additionally, this subsection requires that the President maintain a record of the members to whom a finding or notice has been reported and provide that record to the congressional intelligence committee in question within 30 days.

Finally, this subsection clarifies that, as a matter of construction, any reference in sections 501, 502, or 503 to a requirement that information be provided to the intelligence committees shall be construed to require that such information be provided to all members of those committees, except as provided in revised Section 503(c)(2).

The Committee understands well the need to protect intelligence information from unauthorized disclosure and the prerogatives of the executive branch with respect to the protection of classified information. However, these principles must be balanced against the constitutional requirement for congressional oversight.

Section 503 of the National Security Act attempted to establish a balance between the executive and legislative branches. Over the past eight years, the balance was tipped towards the executive at the expense of congressional oversight. That state of affairs was particularly troubling in light of the controversial nature of some of the programs that were not briefed to the full membership of the intelligence committees. This section resets that balance with respect for the executive branch's prerogatives, but with an eye on ensuring that Congress is able to fulfill its oversight responsibility.

SUBTITLE D—REPORTS AND OTHER CONGRESSIONAL OVERSIGHT

Section 331. Report on financial intelligence on terrorist assets

Section 331 modifies 50 U.S.C. Section 404(m) to change the requirement for the United States Department of the Treasury to submit a report to Congress on financial intelligence concerning terrorist assets. The existing provision requires the report to be submitted semiannually. This section would change the law to require that the report be submitted once every year and eliminates certain data requirements from that report.

Section 332. Annual personnel level assessments for the Intelligence Community

Section 332 provides a new mechanism for overseeing personnel growth in the Intelligence Community by requiring the DNI, in consultation with the head of the element of the Intelligence Community concerned, to prepare an annual assessment of the personnel and contractor levels for each element of the Intelligence Community for the subsequent fiscal year.

The assessment required by Section 332 must report information about budgeted personnel and contractor costs and levels, a comparison of this information to current fiscal year data and data from the previous five fiscal years, and a justification for the requested personnel and contractor levels. The assessment also requires the DNI to affirm that, based on current and projected funding, the individual elements of the Intelligence Community will have sufficient internal infrastructure and training resources to support the requested personnel and contractor levels and sufficient funding to support the administrative and operational activities of the requested personnel.

Section 332 also requires that the assessment contain information about intelligence collectors and analysts employed or contracted by each element of the Intelligence Community, and contractors who are the subjects of any inspector general investigations. The assessment must be submitted to the congressional intelligence committees concurrent with the submission of the President's budget request.

The Committee believes that the personnel level assessment required by Section 332 will provide information necessary for the executive branch and Congress to understand the consequences of modifying the Intelligence Community's personnel levels. Section 332 recognizes that personnel growth must be better planned in the future to accomplish the goals of strengthening intelligence collection, analysis, and dissemination. In addition, the Administration must adequately fund personnel growth and structure its resources to ensure that personnel growth does not compromise the implementation and execution of other programs.

With regard to historical contractor levels to be included in the annual assessments, the DNI has expressed concern that there was no comprehensive effort, prior to the ODN's contractor inventory initiated in June 2006, to capture information on the number and costs of contractors throughout the Intelligence Community. In light of the concerns outlined by the DNI, the Committee understands that information about contractor levels prior to June 2006 may need to be reported as a best estimate.

The personnel assessment required in Section 332 should assist the DNI and the congressional intelligence committees in determining the appropriate balance of contractors and permanent government employees.

Section 333. Semiannual reports on nuclear weapons programs of Iran, Syria, and North Korea

Section 333 requires the DNI to submit to Congress classified reports on the nuclear intentions and capabilities of Iran, Syria, and North Korea not less than once in the four months after enactment and semiannually thereafter. This section provides that the DNI may submit a National Intelligence Estimate on the intentions and capabilities of any one of the three countries in lieu of submitting a report on that particular country during a six-month period.

Section 334. Annual report on foreign language proficiency in the Intelligence Community

Section 334 requires the DNI to report annually on the Intelligence Community's proficiency in foreign languages, including foreign language training. The report must provide data on positions in the various Intelligence Community elements that require foreign language proficiency, the number of personnel hired with such proficiency, and the efforts of those elements to recruit, hire, train, and retain personnel with such proficiency. Additionally, the report requires the DNI to make an assessment on the feasibility of hiring foreign nationals previously employed as translators for the U.S. Government in Iraq and Afghanistan to help meet critical language needs in the Intelligence Community. This information is intended to help the Committee better assess the Intelligence Community's ability to manage language resources.

Section 335. Government Accountability Office audits and investigations

Section 335 directs the DNI to ensure that Government Accountability Office (GAO) personnel are provided with access to all information from the Intelligence Community that the Comptroller General determines necessary for a GAO analysis, evaluation, or investigation of an Intelligence Community program or activity, when the Comptroller General conducts such analysis, evaluation, or investigation at the request of a congressional intelligence committee. The scope of this provision is limited to requests from the congressional intelligence committees.

This provision allows the DNI to restrict access to information sought by the GAO if the DNI determines that the restriction is necessary to protect the vital national security interests of the United States. If the DNI makes such a determination, the DNI must submit a statement of the reasons for the determination to the congressional intelligence committees.

Section 336. Certification of compliance with oversight requirements

Section 336 requires the head of each element of the Intelligence Community to submit on a semiannual basis a certification that the element is in full compliance with the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947 requiring that the congressional intelligence committees be kept fully and currently informed of intelligence activities.

This section provides that, if the head of an element is unable to issue such a certification, he or she must submit to the congressional intelligence committees an explanation as to why a certification could not be made and affirm that the relevant information will be submitted to the committees as soon as is possible.

The purpose of this section is to ensure that elements of the Intelligence Community remain current and timely with respect to their notification obligations.

Section 337. Reports on foreign industrial espionage

Section 337 modifies 50 U.S.C. Section 2170b(b)(1) and (2) to change the requirement for the submission of a report to Congress on Foreign Economic Collection and Industrial Espionage. The existing provision requires the report to be submitted annually. This section would change the law to require that the report be submitted once every two years.

Section 338. Report on intelligence community contractors

Section 338 requires the DNI to provide a comprehensive report on the use of contractors in the Intelligence Community. The report must include data on several critical questions concerning the use of contractors, including: a description of guidance issued by the elements of the Intelligence Community on the hiring, training, security clearance, and assignment of contract personnel; an identification of contracts in which the contractor is performing a substantially similar function to a government employee; an assessment of costs incurred or savings achieved by awarding contracts for the performance of specific functions instead of using full-time employees of the Intelligence Community; an assessment of the appropriateness of using contractors to perform the activities; and an estimate of the number of contracts and the number of contract personnel performing intelligence functions.

These reporting requirements are designed to address the Committee's concerns regarding the Intelligence Community's large contractor workforce, including: the lack of documentation regarding the size and use of the workforce; a clear definition of the functions that may be appropriately performed by contractors; or procedures for overseeing contractors and preventing any waste, fraud, and abuse that may occur. The report is intended to aid both the Intelligence Community and the congressional intelligence committees in conducting oversight and devising appropriate policy solutions.

Section 339. Report on transformation of the intelligence capabilities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation Section 339 requires the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to submit a comprehensive report on its efforts to transform its intelligence capabilities and to achieve long-term goals for developing the national security functions of the Bureau. This report is intended to help establish clear goals for the development of the effective functioning of the Bureau as an intelligence agency.

Section 340. Report on intelligence resources dedicated to Iraq and Afghanistan

Section 340 requires the DNI and the Secretary of Defense to submit to the congressional intelligence and defense committees a report on the intelligence resources dedicated to Iraq and Afghanistan during the preceding two fiscal years and on the plan for fiscal year 2010. The Committee wants to ensure that such resources are sufficient to support policy determinations and tactical decisions related to U.S. forces deployed in these two theaters.

Section 341. Report on International Traffic in Arms Regulations

The executive branch and industry have repeatedly identified the International Traffic in Arms Regulation (ITAR) as an impediment to technology development. ITAR was intended to protect sensitive technologies and information from being transferred to nations deemed a potential security risk. Government and industry assert that the State Department has managed ITAR in such a way so as to encourage non-U.S. companies to develop a collaborative research and development environment that has allowed the indigenous production of banned technologies, which defeats the premise of ITAR and causes a significant loss of market share in key industries for U.S. corporations.

This section requires the DNI to report to the congressional intelligence committees and to the congressional foreign affairs committees regarding the threat to national security posed by foreign government attempts to acquire sensitive technology and the effectiveness of ITAR in mitigating that threat.

The Foreign Relations Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010, which passed the House in June 2009, would give the President authority to reform certain aspects of ITAR's management. The Committee expects that the report required by this section will help the President and Congress better evaluate the merits of such a decision.

Commercial imagery providers have suggested that the U.S. Government has imposed on them significant legal restrictions. These providers are concerned that U.S. restrictions on the sale of commercial imagery are beginning to inhibit their growth and their competitiveness in foreign markets, especially as foreign imagery satellites improve and foreign reliance on U.S. systems diminishes. The Committee expects the report called for by this section to help Congress better understand the implications of these restrictions.

Section 342. Report on nuclear trafficking

Section 342 requires the DNI to report to certain congressional committees on the illicit trade of nuclear and radiological material and equipment. The report must include: details of all cases of illicit sale, transfer, brokering, or transport of nuclear material or nuclear explosive devices; an assessment of the countries that pose the greatest risk of nuclear trafficking; and a discussion of any dissents, caveats, gaps, or other information that would reduce confidence in the assessment of the countries that pose the greatest risk of nuclear trafficking. The Committee remains concerned about the threat from the proliferation of nuclear and radiological materials and equipment, and this report is intended to deliver an assessment of that threat.

Section 343. Study on revoking pensions of persons who commit unauthorized disclosures of classified information

Section 343 requires the DNI to conduct a study on the feasibility of revoking the pensions of personnel in the Intelligence Community who commit unauthorized disclosures of classified information and to report the results of that study to the congressional intelligence committees.

Section 344. Study on electronic waste destruction practices of the Intelligence Community

Section 344 requires the Inspector General of the Intelligence Community to conduct a study on the security and environmental impacts of the current electronic waste disposal practices of the Intelligence Community and provide the results to the congressional intelligence committees. The Committee is particularly concerned about the security implications of poorly-managed electronic waste disposal, but these disposal practices also raise questions about potential for adverse environmental effects.

Section 345. Report on retirement benefits for former employees of Air America

Section 345 requires the DNI to submit a report to Congress on the advisability of providing federal retirement benefits to United States citizens who were employees of Air America during a period when it was owned or controlled by the U. S. Government. This assessment must include a review of the costs associated with providing such a benefit and any recommendations for legislative action necessary to enact such a benefit.

Section 346. Study on college tuition programs for employees of the Intelligence Community

Section 346 requires the DNI to conduct a study on the feasibility of providing matching funds to college savings plans of personnel in the Intelligence Community and establishing a program to pay the college tuition for the children of an employee of the Intelligence Community who dies in the line of duty. The purpose of this study is to determine whether it would be practical to provide additional assistance to employees of the Intelligence Community who face college tuition payments.

Section 347. National Intelligence Estimate on global supply chain vulnerabilities

Section 347 requires the DNI to submit to Congress a National Intelligence Estimate or National Intelligence Assessment on the risks to U.S. national security resulting from the presence of counterfeit electronic components that may be defective or deliberately manipulated by foreign governments or criminal organizations. With the growing concerns over cybersecurity, the Committee believes it is appropriate to focus the Intelligence Community's attention on threats emanating from the global supply chain that provides much of the computer systems for both government and private industry.

Section 348. Review of records relating to potential health risks among Desert Storm veterans

Section 348 requires the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (DCIA) to conduct a classification review of all CIA records relevant to known or potential health effects suffered by veterans of Operation Desert Storm. This section further requires the DCIA to report the results of the classification review to Congress.

Section 349. Review of pensions of employees affected by "five and out" program of the Federal Bureau of Investigation Section 349 states that none of the funds authorized by the bill may be used to implement an FBI program that requires the mandatory reassignment of a FBI supervisor after he or she serves in a management position for seven years. Funds may only be expended for this program after the Director of the FBI certifies to the congressional intelligence committees that the Director has completed a review of issues related to a previous program that required the mandatory reassignment of an FBI supervisor after he or she served five years in a management position.

Section 350. Summary of intelligence relating to terrorist recidivism of detainees held at United States Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba

Section 350 requires that the DNI, in consultation with the DCIA and the Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, make publicly available an unclassified summary of intelligence relating to recidivism of detainees currently or formerly held at the U.S. Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and an assessment of the likelihood that such detainees will engage in terrorism or communicate with persons in terrorist organizations.

Section 351. Summary of intelligence on Uighur detainees held at United States Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba

Section 351 requires that the DNI, in consultation with the DCIA and the Director of the DIA, make publicly available an unclassified summary of intelligence relating to threats posed by Uighur detainees currently or formerly held at the U.S. Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and an assessment of the likelihood that those detainees will engage in terrorism or communicate with persons in terrorist organizations.

Section 352. Report on interrogation research and training

Section 352 requires that the DNI, in coordination with the heads of the relevant elements of the Intelligence Community, submit to the congressional intelligence committees and the congressional appropriations committees a report on the state of research, analysis, and training in interrogation and debriefing process. The report must include: an assessment of the quality and value of scientific and technical research in interrogation and debriefing practices; the state of interrogation and debriefing training in the Intelligence Community; the adequacy of efforts to enhance career paths for employees who conduct interrogations and debriefings; and the effectiveness of processes for studying and implementing best practices for interrogation and debriefing.

Section 353. Report on plans to increase diversity within the intelligence community

Section 353 requires that the DNI, in coordination with the heads of the elements of the Intelligence Community, submit to the congressional intelligence committees a report on the plans of each element to increase diversity within the intelligence community. Those reports must include: specific plans to achieve the goals articulated in the DNI's strategic plan on equal opportunity and diversity; plans and initiatives to increase recruiting and hiring of diverse candidates; plans and initiatives to improve retention of diverse federal employees at the junior, midgrade, senior, and management levels; a description of specific diversity awareness training and education programs; and a description of performance metrics to measure the success of carrying out these plans.

Section 354. Review of Federal Bureau of Investigation exercise of enforcement jurisdiction in foreign nations

Section 354 requires that, no later than 60 days after enactment, the Director of the FBI conduct a review of constraints under international law and the laws of foreign nations to the assertion of enforcement jurisdiction with respect to criminal investigations of terrorism offenses under U.S. law.

Section 355. Repeal of certain reporting requirements

Section 355 eliminates certain reporting requirements that were considered overly burdensome to the Intelligence Community in cases where the usefulness of the report has diminished, either because of changing events or because the information contained in those reports is duplicative of information already obtained through other avenues. The Committee is sensitive to the administrative burden placed on the Intelligence Community through reporting requirements, and seeks to eliminate, wherever possible, those reporting requirements that are no longer useful to aid congressional oversight.

Section 356. Incorporation of reporting requirements

Section 356 incorporates into the Act by reference each requirement contained in the classified annex to submit a report to the congressional intelligence committees to clarify that the requirement to complete these reports is a requirement in law.

Section 357. Conforming amendments

Section 357 makes conforming changes to the National Security Act of 1947 arising from changes and additions to the reporting requirements enumerated in Section 507 of that Act.

SUBTITLE E—OTHER MATTERS

Section 361. Modification of availability of funds for different intelligence activities

Section 361 conforms the text of Section 504(a)(3)(B) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414(a)(3)(B)) with the text of Section 102A(d)(5)(A)(ii), as amended by Section 1011(a) of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, which governs the transfer and reprogramming of certain intelligence funding by the DNI. It replaces the “unforeseen requirements” standard in Section 504(a)(3)(B) with a more flexible standard (from Section 102A(d)(5)(A)(ii)) to govern reprogramming and transfers of funds authorized for a different intelligence or intelligence-related activity.

The new standard permits reprogramming or transfer authority if the new use of funds “supports an emergent need, improves program effectiveness, or increases efficiency.” This modification brings the standard for reprogramming and transfers of intelligence funding into conformity with the standards applicable to reprogramming and transfers under Section 102A of the National Security Act of 1947. This provision would make no changes to the relevant congressional reporting requirements or processes associated with the approval of reprogramming requests.

Section 362. Protection of certain national security information

Section 362 amends Section 601 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 421) to increase the criminal penalties for individuals with authorized access to classified information who intentionally disclose information identifying a covert agent, if such individual knows the United States is taking affirmative measures to conceal the covert agent’s intelligence relationship to the United States.

Section 362 also amends Section 603(a) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 423(a)) to provide that the annual report from the President on the protection of identities of certain U.S. undercover intelligence officers, agents, informants, and sources also include an assessment of the need for any legislative modification for the purposes of improving legal protections for covert agents.

Section 363. Extension of authority to delete information about receipt and disposition of foreign gifts and decorations

Current law (5 U.S.C. 7342) requires certain federal employees, spouses, dependents, and others to file reports with their employing agency regarding receipt of gifts or decorations from foreign governments. The employing agency is then required to file detailed reports about these gifts, including the source of each gift, with the Secretary of State, who must then publish a list of these reports in the Federal Register.

The public disclosure of gifts or decorations to personnel and certain contractors of the Intelligence Community has the potential to compromise intelligence sources or confirm intelligence relationships with foreign governments. Recognizing the risks to national security, Congress has granted limited exemptions to this rule to the DCIA and to the DNI. Section 363 provides the heads of each element of the Intelligence Community the same limited exemption from the specified public reporting requirements previously provided only to the DNI and DCIA but requires that any information withheld from the Secretary of State be provided to and retained by the DNI.

Section 364. Exemption of dissemination of terrorist identity information from the Freedom of Information Act

Section 364 establishes procedures facilitating the transfer of information concerning the identity of known or suspected terrorists from the National Counterterrorism Center to the Terrorist Screening Center. This section is designed to encourage the dissemination of information vital to the prevention of terrorist attacks to state and local law enforcement by ensuring that the dissemination does not render information that would otherwise be exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552) subject to such disclosure.

Section 365. Misuse of the Intelligence Community and Office of the Director of National Intelligence name, initials, or seal

Section 365 adds a subsection to the National Security Act of 1947 prohibiting the unauthorized use of the official name, initials, or seal of either the Office of the Director of National Intelligence or the Intelligence Community. This section also permits the Attorney General to pursue injunctive relief for such unauthorized use.

Section 366. Security Clearances: Reports; Ombudsman; Reciprocity

The Committee welcomes the Intelligence Community's progress in improving the timeliness of security clearance processing but remains concerned that the processing of some security clearances, particularly for industry, takes too long. Section 366 requires a series of reports that will contribute needed data for ongoing congressional oversight of the security clearance process and effective measurement of progress.

This section requires the President to conduct an audit every four years regarding the manner in which the executive branch determines whether a security clearance is required for a particular position in the federal government. This section also requires the President to submit to Congress an annual report regarding the number of employees and contractors with security clearances, the amount of time taken to process security clearance determinations, and the number of security clearance determinations that have taken longer than one year to complete. The section further requires that the President submit to Congress 180 days after enactment of this Act a report on establishing security clearance adjudication standards across the federal government.

This section also directs the DNI to appoint an ombudsman for security clearances within the Intelligence Community. An ombudsman will provide persons experiencing delays in obtaining their security clearances with an avenue for seeking help resolving such delays.

The Committee has conducted extensive oversight on the security clearance process, and in particular on the Administration's attempts to reform the process. In the course of that oversight, GAO has testified to the lack of meaningful quality metrics to evaluate the efficacy of the security clearance process. The legislative measures in this section are designed to address the concerns raised by GAO in its testimony.

Section 367. Limitation on use of funds for the transfer or release of individuals detained at United States Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba

Section 367 states that the DNI may not use any of the funds authorized by the bill to release or transfer an individual held at the U.S. Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to the United States, its territories, or possessions until 120 days after the President has submitted a plan to Congress. The plan must include: an assessment of the risk that each individual to be transferred or released poses to the national security of the United States; a proposal for the disposition of each such individual; a plan to mitigate any risks, should the proposed disposition include the release or transfer of that individual to the United States, its territories, or its possessions; and a summary of consultations by the President with the chief executive of the State, District of Columbia, territory, or possession to which an individual may be transferred or released.

Section 368. Intelligence community financial improvement and audit readiness

Section 368 expresses the sense of Congress regarding the need for each element of the Intelligence Community to develop and implement a plan to become compliant with financial management and audit readiness standards. This section also requires that the DNI conduct a review of the status of the auditability compliance of each element of the Intelligence Community and develop a plan and timeline to achieve a full, unqualified audit of each element by September 30, 2013.

TITLE IV—MATTERS RELATING TO ELEMENTS OF THE INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY

SUBTITLE A—OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR OF NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE

Section 401. Clarification of limitation on co-location of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence Section 103(e) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 403–3(e)) provides that the ODNI may not be co-located with any element of the Intelligence Community. Section 401 clarifies that the ban applies only to the co-location of the ODNI headquarters with the headquarters of another element of the Intelligence Community. It also provides the President with authority to waive that limitation where the interests of national security so dictate. Further, in response to an ambiguous requirement concerning the location of all federal government offices, this section clarifies that the ODNI offices may be located outside of the District of Columbia.

Section 402. Membership of the Director of National Intelligence on the Transportation Security Oversight Board

Section 402 substitutes the DNI (or the DNI's designee) for the DCIA as a member of the Transportation Security Oversight Board, as established by Section 115(b)(1) of Title 49. The Transportation Security Oversight Board is responsible for, among other things, coordinating intelligence, security, and law enforcement activities relating to transportation and facilitating the sharing of intelligence, security, and law enforcement information relating to transportation among federal agencies.

Section 403. Additional duties of the Director of Science and Technology

Section 403 clarifies the additional duties of the DNI's Director of Science and Technology. This provision ensures there is uniformity in the definitions of basic, applied, and advanced research goals and improved prioritization and coordination of science and technology across the Intelligence Community.

Section 404. Plan to implement recommendations of the data center energy efficiency reports

Section 404 requires the DNI to submit a plan to Congress on compliance with the Environmental Protection Agency's report on data center energy efficiency submitted to Congress under Section 1 of P.L. 109–431. The plan is intended to encourage the Intelligence Community to promote the use of energy efficient technologies to reduce consumption of resources such as power and water by the Intelligence Community's data centers.

Section 405. Title of Chief Information Officer of the Intelligence Community

Section 405 clarifies that the Chief Information Officer (CIO) at ODNI serves as the Intelligence Community's CIO, and not only as the CIO for the ODNI.

Section 406. Inspector General of the Intelligence Community

Section 1078 of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevent Act of 2004 authorized the DNI to establish an Office of the Inspector General if the DNI determined that such an Inspector General would be beneficial to improving the operations and effectiveness of the ODNI. The DNI created an Intelligence Community Inspector General (IC/IG) in DNI Instruction No. 2005–10 (September 7, 2005). However, the Committee believes that an IC/IG with full statutory authorities and independence can better ensure that the ODNI identifies problems and deficiencies within the Intelligence Community, especially with respect to the manner in which elements of the Intelligence Community share information and undertake joint or cooperative activities.

Section 406 creates a statutory IC/IG to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate. The IC/IG will report directly to the DNI and may only be removed by the President, who must communicate the reasons for removal to the congressional intelligence committees. The DNI may prohibit the IC/IG from conducting an investigation, inspection, or audit if the DNI determines that such action is necessary to protect vital national security interests. The DNI must provide the congressional intelligence committees with the reasons for such a determination within seven days.

The IC/IG will have subpoena authority, though information within the possession of the United States Government must be obtained through other procedures. Subject to the DNI's concurrence, the IC/IG may request information from any department, agency, or element of the U.S. Government.

The IC/IG must submit semiannual reports to the DNI that include a description of significant problems relating to the programs and operations of the Intelligence Community, and the DNI must submit such reports to Congress within 30 days of receipt. The IC/IG must also report immediately to the DNI serious or flagrant violations of law. Within seven days, the DNI must transmit those reports to the congressional intelligence committees.

Employees of the Intelligence Community or employees of a contractor who intend to report to Congress a violation of law or Executive Order, a false statement to or willful withholding from Congress, or other "urgent concerns" may report such complaints and supporting information to the IC/IG. The IC/IG must transmit this complaint, along with a credibility determination, to the DNI, which must then transmit the complaint, credibility determination, and supporting documentation to the congressional intelligence committees. This section does not disturb, and the Committee intends to retain, the authoritative guidance for analogous provisions of the Intelligence Community Whistleblower Act of 1998, Pub. L. No. 105–272 (October 20, 1998), the Senate Committee report for that legislation, S. Rept. 105–185, and the conference report, H. Rept. 105–780.

For matters within the jurisdiction of both the IC/IG and an Inspector General for another element of the Intelligence Community, the Inspectors General (IGs) shall resolve who will undertake an investigation, inspection, or audit. In resolving that question, the IGs may request the assistance of the Intelligence Community Inspectors General Forum, an already extant body codified in this section. In the event that the IGs are still unable to resolve the question, they shall submit the matter for resolution to the DNI and to the head of the element in which an Inspector General with jurisdiction is located.

The Committee notes that the current DNI has expressed his support for a statutory IG in testimony. In addition, the previous Inspector General at the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI/IG) has testified to the challenges that the ODNI/IG faces in the absence of an authorizing statute and to the benefits that the creation of a statutory IC/IG would bring to the oversight of the Intelligence Community.

SUBTITLE B—CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Section 411. Review of covert action programs by Inspector General of the Central Intelligence Agency

Title V of the National Security Act of 1947, entitled “Accountability for Intelligence Activities,” sets forth the Act’s basic requirements for executive branch obligations to keep the congressional intelligence committees fully informed of intelligence activities. Section 503 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413b) is specifically devoted to presidential findings and congressional notification on covert actions.

Section 411 of this bill augments oversight of covert actions by requiring that the CIA Inspector General (CIA/IG) conduct an audit of each covert action at least once every three years and submit to the congressional intelligence committees a report containing the audit results within 60 days of completing the audit. To a considerable extent, this requirement codifies in statute existing practice and assures its regularity.

The DNI has expressed concern that this audit requirement, and several other provisions pertaining to reports by the Intelligence Community, raises concerns with respect to the President’s authority to control access to national security information. To allay any such concern regarding the covert action audit requirement, the Committee has drafted Section 411 to state that the requirement is subject to the longstanding provisions of section 17(b)(3) and (4) of the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949 (50 U.S.C. 403q(b)(3) and (4)), which empower the DCIA to prohibit the CIA/IG from initiating, carrying out, or completing an audit if the Director determines that the prohibition is necessary to protect vital national security interests of the United States, provided that the Director reports the reasons to the congressional intelligence committees.

Section 412. Prohibition on the use of private contractors for interrogations involving persons in the custody of the Central Intelligence Agency

Section 412 prohibits the DCIA from obligating or expending funds to any contractor to conduct the interrogation of a detainee in the custody of the CIA. The DNI may, however, grant a waiver if the DCIA determines that no employee of the federal government is capable and available to conduct the interrogation and that the interrogation is in the national interest of the United States. This section also provides that contractors conducting interrogations pursuant to a waiver by the DNI shall be governed by the same laws that would apply if the interrogation were conducted by an employee of the federal government. The Committee believes that conducting custodial interrogations is an inherently governmental function, which should, to the maximum extent practicable, be conducted by U.S. Government personnel.

Section 413. Appeals from decisions of Central Intelligence Agency contracting officers

Section 413 amends current law by providing that an appeal from a decision of a CIA contracting officer may be made to whichever of the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals or the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals is specified by the contracting officer as the appropriate Board. This section also provides that the board so specified shall have jurisdiction to decide the appeal.

Section 414. Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency

Section 414 establishes the position of Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (DDCIA) and specifies that the President shall appoint the DDCIA. This section further outlines that the duties of the DDCIA are to assist the DCIA in carrying out his or her duties and to act as DCIA during the absence of the DCIA or a vacancy in the position.

Section 415. Protection against reprisals

Section 415 expands the protections to CIA personnel who provide assistance to the CIA/IG. Section 17(e)(3)(B) of the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949 (50 U.S.C. 403q(e)(3)(b)) authorizes the CIA/IG to receive and investigate both complaints and information. Currently, Section 17(e)(3)(B) only extends protections to employees against reprisal or threat of reprisal made in response to complaints filed with the CIA/IG. This provision would clarify that these protections also apply with respect to information provided to the CIA/IG employees that may not be in direct connection with a complaint.

Section 416. Requirement for video recording of interrogations of persons in the custody of the Central Intelligence Agency

Section 416 adds to the National Security Act of 1947 a requirement for the DCIA to establish guidelines to ensure that interrogations of detainees in CIA custody are recorded in video form, and that the video recording and attendant audio recording of such interrogation is maintained for a specified period of time. This provision does not apply a videotaping requirement to security officers who might question a witness or a suspect in the course of their official duties while assigned to CIA headquarters.

SUBTITLE C—OTHER ELEMENTS

Section 421. Homeland Security intelligence elements

Section 421 affirms that both the Coast Guard and Office of Intelligence and Analysis in the Department of Homeland Security are elements of the Intelligence Community. This section further clarifies that the Office of Intelligence and Analysis is the Department of Homeland Security's Intelligence Community member in accordance with existing practice and as defined in Executive Order 12333. The Coast Guard is listed herein as a military, multi-mission, maritime service that is located within the Department of Homeland Security.

Section 422. Clarification of inclusion of Drug Enforcement Administration as an element of the Intelligence Community

Section 422 codifies the joint decision of the DNI and the Attorney General that the Drug Enforcement Administration should be within the Intelligence Community.

Section 423. Repeal of certain authorities relating to the Office of the National Counterintelligence Executive Section 423 amends the authorities and structures of the National Counterintelligence Executive (NCIX) to eliminate administrative authorities that had been vested in the NCIX when that official was appointed by and reported to the President. Those authorities are unnecessary now that the NCIX is appointed by and under the authority of the DNI.

Section 424. Confirmation of appointment of heads of certain components of the Intelligence Community

Section 424 establishes that the directors of the National Security Agency (NSA) and National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) are to be presidentially-appointed and Senate-confirmed. Under present law and practice, the directors of the NSA and NRO, each with a distinct and significant role in the national intelligence mission, are not confirmed by the Senate in relation to their leadership of these agencies. Presently, the President appoints the Director of NSA and the Secretary of Defense appoints the Director of the NRO. Under current law, neither of these appointments must be confirmed by the Senate unless a military officer is promoted or transferred into the position.

The Committee believes that holding confirmation hearings in both the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Armed Services Committee would bring to these positions an appropriate level of accountability and responsiveness to congressional oversight.

Section 425. Associate Director of the National Security Agency for Compliance and Training

Section 425 establishes an Associate Director for Compliance and Training at the NSA. This official will report to the NSA Director and will be responsible for ensuring that all NSA surveillance programs are in compliance with applicable laws, regulations, and policies.

The Committee understands the challenges involved in bringing together surveillance laws with the complicated and ever-changing technology that the NSA uses to collect vital intelligence. To date, the NSA has distributed the responsibility for compliance and training across several offices within the organization, with none occupying a sufficiently prominent position to influence outcomes effectively.

The Committee believes that the establishment of an additional Associate Director whose sole responsibility is to ensure that each component within NSA is adhering to the rules governing surveillance authorities is the best way to minimize the risk of non-compliance.

The Associate Director for Compliance and Training should have expertise in both the legal and technical arenas of surveillance so that he or she can be accountable for each and every surveillance program the NSA administers.

The Associate Director for Compliance and Training will also be responsible for establishing and implementing a training regimen to ensure that the NSA workforce understands the procedures necessary to comply with the law.

Section 426. General Counsel of the National Security Agency

Section 426 requires presidential appointment and Senate confirmation for the General Counsel of the NSA. The General Counsel of the NSA faces important legal, privacy, and civil liberties issues that are only increasing in complexity. The Committee believes that holding confirmation hearings in both the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Armed Services Committee for the NSA's General Counsel is a warranted additional measure of congressional oversight.

Section 427. Inspector General of the National Security Agency

Section 427 amends Section 12 of the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.) to establish an Inspector General of the NSA. As noted, complex legal, privacy, and civil liberties issues may arise during the performance of the NSA's mission. The Committee believes that the Inspector General will play a vital role in ensuring that the NSA effectively executes its mission in a manner consistent with all applicable laws and regulations.

Section 428. Charter for the National Reconnaissance Office

Section 428 requires that the DNI and Secretary of Defense jointly submit to the congressional intelligence committees and congressional defense committees a revised charter for the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO). The NRO charter has not changed since the agency's founding nearly forty years ago, and the Committee believes an updated charter would help the NRO better implement its current mission.

Section 515. Technical amendments to Section 105 of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2004

Section 515 clarifies that the reorganization of the Office of Intelligence and Analysis of the Department of the Treasury into the Office of Terrorism and Financial Intelligence does not affect its status as an element of the Intelligence Community or the Director of National Intelligence's responsibility with respect to that office.

Section 516. Technical amendments to the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004

Section 516 makes technical and conforming amendments to the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act that correct typographical errors, update titles, and make language internally consistent.

Section 517. Technical amendments relating to the multi-year National Intelligence Program

Section 517 updates the "multi-year national intelligence program" to incorporate organizational and nominal changes made by the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act.

Section 518. Technical amendments to the National Security Act of 1947

Section 519. Technical amendments to Title 10, United States Code

Section 519 amends Title 10 by changing the title of "Associate Director of CIA for Military Affairs" to "Associate Director of Military Affairs, CIA."

STATEMENT OF FEDERAL MANDATES

Section 423 of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act (as amended by Section 101(a)(2) of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, P.L. 104-4) requires a statement of whether the provisions of the reported bill include unfunded mandates. In compliance with this requirement, the Committee has received a letter from the Congressional Budget Office included herein.

STATEMENT ON CONGRESSIONAL EARMARKS

Pursuant to clause 9 of Rule XXI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, the Committee reports that the bill contains no congressional earmarks, limited tax benefits, or limited tariff benefits.

Enclosure.

H.R. 2701—Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010

Summary: H.R. 2701 would authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2010 for intelligence activities of the U.S. government, for the Intelligence Community Management Account, and for the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System (CIARDS).

Since CBO does not provide estimates for classified programs, this estimate addresses only the unclassified portions of the bill. In addition, CBO cannot provide estimates of provisions that affect both classified and unclassified programs. On that limited basis, CBO estimates that implementing certain provisions of the bill would cost $236 million in 2010 and $669 million over the 2010–2014 period. Enacting H.R. 2701 would not affect direct spending or revenues.

H.R. 2701 includes new subpoena authority that would impose an intergovernmental and private-sector mandate as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA), but CBO expects the cost of complying with the mandate would be small and well below the thresholds established in UMRA ($69 million for intergovernmental mandates and $139 million for private-sector mandates in 2009, adjusted annually for inflation).

Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 2701 is shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 050 (national defense).

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—
	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014	2010– 2014
CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION
Intelligence Community Management Account:
Authorization Level	673	0	0	0	0	673
Estimated Outlays	236	283	121	20	7	667
Training in African Languages:
Authorization Level	2	0	0	0	0	2
Estimated Outlays	0	1	1	0	0	2
Total Changes:
Authorization Level	675	0	0	0	0	675
Estimated Outlays	236	284	122	20	7	669

Basis of estimate: For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 2701 will be enacted near the beginning of fiscal year 2010, that the specified amounts will be appropriated, and that outlays will follow historical spending patterns for existing or similar programs.

Intelligence Community Management Account

Section 104 would authorize the appropriation of $673 million for the Intelligence Community Management Account, which provides the principal source of funding for the Office of the Director of National Intelligence and provides resources for coordinating programs, overseeing budgets, and managing the intelligence agencies. CBO estimates that implementing this provision would cost $667 million over the 2010–2014 period, assuming appropriation of the specified amount.

Training in African languages

Section 314 would authorize the Director of National Intelligence, after consultation with the National Security Education Board, to establish a pilot program to provide scholarships for training in certain African languages not currently covered by existing scholarship programs. The bill would authorize the appropriation of $2 million for that purpose, and CBO estimates that those amounts would result in outlays of $1 million in both fiscal years 2010 and 2011, assuming the appropriation of the specified amount.

Central Intelligence Agency Retirement and Disability System

Section 201 would authorize the appropriation of $291 million to CIARDS to cover retirement costs attributable to military service and various unfunded liabilities. The appropriation to CIARDS is considered mandatory, and the authorization under this bill would be the same as the amount in the CBO baseline. Thus, this estimate does not ascribe any additional cost to that provision.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: H.R. 2701 contains an intergovernmental and private-sector mandate as defined in UMRA. Section 501 would extend the National Commission for the Review of Research and Development Programs of the U.S. Intelligence Community, and the subpoena authority of that commission. Entities in the public and private sectors, if subpoenaed, would be required to provide testimony, documents, or other evidence. CBO expects that the commission would likely issue subpoenas sparingly and that the costs to comply with a subpoena would not be significant. Thus, we estimate that the total costs of the mandate would be small and well below the annual thresholds established in UMRA ($69 million for intergovernmental mandates and $139 million for private-sector mandates in 2009, adjusted annually for inflation).

The bill also would create a grant program to promote the recruitment and retention of an ethnically and culturally diverse workforce within the intelligence community, which would benefit public colleges and universities. Any costs they may incur, including matching funds, would result from complying with conditions of aid.

Estimate prepared by: Federal costs: Jason Wheelock; Impact on state, local, and tribal governments: Burke Doherty; Impact on the private sector: Elizabeth Bass.

Estimate approved by: Theresa Gullo, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

On June 18, 2009, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence ordered H.R. 2701, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010, to be reported. As you know, this measure contains certain provisions that are within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Armed Services.

Our Committee recognizes the importance of H.R. 2701 and the need for the legislation to move expeditiously. Therefore, while we have a valid claim to jurisdiction over this legislation, the Committee on Armed Services will waive further consideration of H.R. 2701. I do so with the understanding that by waiving further consideration of the bill, the Committee does not waive any future jurisdictional claims over similar measures. In the event of a conference with the Senate on this bill, the Committee on Armed Services reserves the right to seek the appointment of conferees.

I would appreciate the inclusion of this letter and a copy of your response in your Committee's report on H.R. 2701 and the Congressional Record during consideration of the measure on the House floor.

MINORITY VIEWS

H.R. 2701—Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2010

We are disappointed that this year's intelligence authorization bill has taken a significant step back from last year's bipartisan legislation. It puts aside consensus in last year's bill and in this year's classified Schedule of Authorizations with respect to many significant issues. Instead, it advances provisions that appear to be designed for partisan messaging rather than to address critical national security issues, and it would reopen and modify areas of bipartisan consensus reached with respect to several discrete issues in the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act. In its current form, the bill also contains provisions that we believe would inappropriately hamper the flexibility and responsiveness of the intelligence community and includes discrete items that we believe are flawed or have not been fully vetted. In many respects, the bill is not fully transparent with respect to its purpose and effect or in making information available to the public that could be released on important issues.

While we believe that the bill has been strengthened by successful bipartisan work on the classified schedule of authorizations and by Republican amendments adopted by the Committee, on balance we have significant reservations with the bill in its current form that force us to oppose it. We hope that these issues can be addressed going forward in the legislative process in order to complete bipartisan legislation to authorize the critical activities of the intelligence community.

THE BILL FAILS TO ADDRESS CRITICAL NATIONAL SECURITY ISSUES, CONCENTRATING INSTEAD ON CREATING PARTISAN COVER

The transition to a new Administration has caused several long-standing national security issues to be revisited, from the President's decision to release legal memoranda concerning sensitive compartmented activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and to close the detention facility at Guantanamo, to decisions to relocate detainees and potentially to bring them into the United States, to the apparent initiation of policies intended to convert the global war on terrorism into a matter of prosecution and litigation. While we recognize that changes in policy are inevitable in a new Administration and that President Obama has also wisely continued many past policies, we are deeply concerned that many decisions with significant implications for the intelligence community have been and continue to be implemented with absolutely no consultation with Congress, contrary to the established practice of the previous Administration.¹

H.R. 2701 fails entirely to address many of these critical issues, abdicating the responsibility of the Committee. In other areas, it appears more focused on creating partisan cover for certain inconvenient truths faced by the Majority than in honestly confronting them. These inconvenient truths include the bipartisan consensus that has existed with respect to critical national security programs, even though they may no longer be seen as “politically correct” as threats become perceived as less imminent. We continue to believe that these issues must be addressed on their substantive merits, with the paramount goal of empowering the intelligence community to protect the American people consistent with our values. It is unfortunate that this bill fails to do so.

National Security Act Amendments

Last year, we wrote that “It is likely that there is no single current issue on which there is a stronger bipartisan consensus than our shared deep concern that the Administration is not fulfilling its statutory duty to keep each member of the Committee fully and currently informed with respect to certain intelligence matters.” It is precisely for this reason that we joined with Chairman Reyes at that time in supporting truly bipartisan language to reform provisions of the National Security Act governing reporting of intelligence activities to the Committee. Inexplicably, that provision was removed from this year’s bill and replaced with a partisan provision with serious flaws. The need for the change was so poorly understood that Chairman Reyes centered his opposition to a Republican amendment to restore the bipartisan language on provisions that had been in his own bill last year, and Majority counsel had to correct the record at markup to clarify that they had not properly described or apparently even understood their own proposal. The core provisions of the National Security Act are no place for such hasty, partisan lawmaking.

This fiasco seems to have arisen because the Majority believed it needed political cover for its claims that it had not been briefed with respect to several intelligence community programs on which the record incontrovertibly shows not only that multiple members were briefed repeatedly on the programs in question on a bipartisan basis, but that they raised no objections, and took no action to object or to defend the programs as career intelligence officers acted in reliance on such approvals. Thus was born the canard that the “problem” somehow was not the failure of members to seek further information or raise whatever concerns they may have had, but instead was the fault of the career briefers, or the process itself. The Majority promptly issued a press release to promise that it would fix such problems—with no mention of the bipartisan provisions from the previous year.² Those provisions were developed to address the real and repeatedly demonstrated problem of briefings that had been too narrowly limited to certain members rather than the new, politically convenient, false issues relating to the conduct of the briefings themselves.

¹We have expressed concern in the past at the failure of the previous Administration to fully brief the Committee with respect to certain discrete matters, but the record is clear that the Committee was consulted regularly with respect to certain major initiatives. By contrast, the current Administration has conducted little to no consultation at all. In fact, the President’s task forces with respect to some of the most relevant issues still have not briefed the Committee even on their processes and have twice cancelled Committee briefings, despite having held repeated meetings with outside advocacy groups. This is plainly unacceptable.

Section 502 of last year's bill makes amendments to certain congressional notification procedures of the National Security Act of 1947. It was the product of bipartisan discussion and agreement between Chairman Reyes and Ranking Member Hoekstra and includes language suggested by both. The provision expressly provided that information briefed to the Committee reporting on activities other than covert actions shall be made available to each member of the Committee, unless the President requests in writing that access to the information be limited and details extraordinary circumstances justifying the request. In the event of such a request to limit access, the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Committee may jointly determine whether and how to limit access to the material within the Committee. Absent such an agreement, access to the information or material would be limited. The provision specifically addressed and balanced the Constitutional powers and responsibilities of both the Executive and Legislative Branches, and set forth a specific mechanism to reconcile them.

By contrast, the partisan provision in Section 321 of this year's bill would do nothing to solve the problem. In fact, it is so poorly drafted that it would lead to nothing but confusion. It nowhere creates a statutory presumption that all Members of the Committee should be briefed. Instead, it would require the Committee to unilaterally develop procedures for the handling of reporting on sensitive matters, even though the President has significant constitutional authorities in the area of national security that Courts have repeatedly said must be considered with and balanced against the authorities of Congress. The provision nowhere provides a mechanism for ensuring that decisions within the Committee are made on a bipartisan basis or for reconciling any dispute between the branches with respect to such reporting, which is a recipe for Constitutional gridlock that could be disastrous with respect to such sensitive matters.

Moreover, the partisan provision purports to regulate objections that Members might wish to raise to a sensitive activity, including a statutory 48 hour time limit. The Majority staff indicated its belief at markup that this provision only requires an objection to be memorialized and transmitted to the Executive Branch within 48 hours, but the overall structure of the provision is not explicit. It is possible that such a provision could be read to restrict the time period in which members could raise objections. While we agree that formalizing and memorializing the process of objection to sensitive activities may be warranted, this sloppy provision nowhere states the legal scope or effect of such an objection and could require hasty decisionmaking on potentially critical matters. Moreover, if circumstances change or additional information is gathered after initial reporting of a covert action, the provision might be read to bar subsequent objection by Congress.

Congressman Mac Thornberry offered an amendment at markup to replace this sloppy provision with last year's bipartisan language—further extended to include reporting of covert actions—even though we believe parts of that compromise are excessively prescriptive and focus disproportionately on legal issues rather than intelligence policy issues. The amendment to remove the partisan provision was defeated virtually on a party line vote, with only Congressman Rush Holt now supporting the original compromise on the Majority side. The core of the National Security Act is far too important for such gamesmanship, and this provision must be addressed and repaired as the legislation advances.

Release of unclassified versions of briefing memoranda and finished intelligence products assessing information gained from detainee reporting

On a related issue, Ranking Member Hoekstra offered an amendment that would allow the American people to reach their own well-informed conclusions with respect to briefings to Congress on the use of Enhanced Interrogation Techniques. This issue gave rise to the broader controversy over briefings to the Committee after President Obama unilaterally and selectively released legal memoranda dealing with previously highly compartmented intelligence activities that lead to public calls for individuals to be held accountable for the activities, despite clear bipartisan consensus and support for the programs in question in repeated briefings to Members of the Committee. Ranking Member Hoekstra and Republican Members and staff of the Committee have had the opportunity to review the memoranda memorializing such briefings and believe that two facts are readily apparent. First, the memoranda clearly indicate that members of the Committee supported the activities in question on a bipartisan basis and raised no objections to the activities in question. Second, while certain redactions might still be justified to protect identities of intelligence community personnel, detainees, or details of sources and methods, there is little reason why the core of the documents could not be declassified and publicly released to allow the American people to decide for themselves.

Similarly, Ranking Member Hoekstra's amendment would have provided for the release of unclassified versions of finished intelligence products assessing the information gained from detainee reporting after the September 11 attacks. Unfortunately, however, despite the President's unilateral decision to release the legal memoranda and publicly confirm substantial elements of these sensitive intelligence activities, the Majority voted in favor of partisan cover and would not support the release of these documents that would allow the full picture to be known and understood. It is ironic that many members of the Committee who have so vehemently argued in favor of greater transparency by the intelligence community and against perceived selective "cherry-picking" of publicly disclosed intelligence opposed this amendment, again for apparent partisan purposes. The record on this matter cannot be fully or fairly evaluated by the public until a version of these documents is made public.

“Global Justice” Initiative

The bill also has not addressed critical aspects of the so-called “Global Justice” initiative being considered by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which we believe could significantly hamper intelligence collection and potentially prevention of terrorist acts by making it a priority to handle these matters abroad as law enforcement matters. While we appreciate the commitments from Chairman Reyes and Subcommittee Chairman Thompson to further review the matter, we believe that the Committee should have immediately made a clear and unambiguous statement against the implementation of any such policy.

The Committee has devoted substantial energy and attention since the September 11, 2001 attacks to ensure that prevention of attacks and intelligence collection take priority in foreign countries over the inherent disadvantages of the criminal justice model. The FBI and Department of Justice should not unilaterally seek to undo these important, carefully coordinated efforts. The 9/11 Commission noted that “The concern about the FBI is that it has long favored its criminal justice mission over its national security mission.” Unfortunately, efforts to develop the “Global Justice” initiative suggest that this message has not yet been fully heeded.

The initiative represents a fundamental policy shift in the fight against radical jihadists. As part of this new initiative, FBI agents would be deployed in the middle of intelligence collection activities worldwide, potentially including the battlefield, to gather evidence. FBI agents would also take first priority in questioning persons of interest rather than trained intelligence interrogators. Thus, FBI agents might read Miranda warnings to non-U.S. persons held overseas who are not entitled to such rights outside the context of a criminal prosecution inside the United States—a significant disincentive for any subject to provide information that might be urgently needed to prevent an attack. And if those detainees didn’t immediately “lawyer up,” FBI agents would ask questions to build a litigation case— not to produce intelligence.

Given the gravity of this potential policy shift, we are pleased that the Committee recognized the importance of some implications of the Global Justice Initiative, but we do not believe sufficient steps have been taken to address our fundamental concerns about this new and dangerous program. On a positive note, the Committee adopted two amendments offered by Congressman Mike Rogers. The first amendment prohibits the use of intelligence funds to read Miranda warnings to non-U.S. person detainees held by the U.S. military overseas. As previously mentioned, we believe strongly that such warnings could impair the immediate collection of critical intelligence and could serve as a significant disincentive to cooperation. It is important to emphasize that U.S. courts have repeatedly held that foreign persons in foreign countries generally do not enjoy constitutional protections, rendering the Miranda warnings unnecessary absent an immediate, specific intent to initiate criminal prosecution.

The second amendment related to the “Global Justice” initiative requires the FBI Director to review the legal problems caused by FBI agents trying to conduct investigations (using intelligence funding) of non U.S. persons outside of the United States and to report his findings to the congressional intelligence committees. As recognized by the authoritative Restatement (Third) of the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, international law clearly provides as a matter of sovereignty that U.S. law enforcement officers may only exercise their functions in other countries with the specific consent of duly authorized officials of those countries. Without such authorization, those countries could protest and seek reparation from the United States.

This initiative must be reviewed carefully as the legislation moves forward.

National Drug Intelligence Center

Congressman Mike Rogers offered an amendment that would have authorized funding to close the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC), which is located in central Pennsylvania and has long-been a controversial and questionable effort inside the intelligence community. U.S. News and World Report once famously describe the center as, a “Drug War boondoggle rocked by scandal” and quoted its first deputy director as stating that the center was, “in search of a mission.” In light of its reputation and dubious usefulness, the previous administration repeatedly recommended the facility be budgeted for closure and its minimal efforts shifted to the more productive and better situated El Paso Intelligence Center. The Majority refused to take responsibility for this boondoggle, and voted against the amendment.

NDIC has only remained open the past several years as a result of receiving the largest single, pork barrel expenditure in the intelligence budget. In the Fiscal Year 2007 Intelligence Authorization Act, the Majority improperly included the earmark in the bill with no transparency, contrary to the applicable rules. Oversight visits and briefings with the Committee have repeatedly borne out that the center is duplicative, poorly located, lacking in mission, with no clear direction for the future, and its funding could be directed to higher intelligence community priorities.

In light of bipartisan, Republican-led, action in the Intelligence Committee in recent years to end the earmark and close NDIC, its political patrons apparently had enough and have attempted to shift its authorization to the House Judiciary Committee after years hidden away in intelligence funding. The resulting attempt to hide oversight for an “intelligence center” in the Judiciary Committee is a direct affront to this Committee’s proper authorities and responsibilities in the House. It is an unprecedented effort to shift and diminish the power of this Committee for purely political reasons and the Majority should not have allowed this bald-faced political move to stand. This amendment would have placed NDIC back under the proper oversight of the House Intelligence Committee and directs, as this Committee has previously, that funds be appropriated to cease the center’s operations.

Since its inception, more than $400 million in taxpayer dollars has been spent with little to show in the way of results. A report by the House Committee on Government Reform and Oversight concluded that NDIC should be terminated because it is “an expensive and duplicative use of scarce Federal drug enforcement resources,” and the Office of Management and Budget previously concluded that “NDIC has experienced problems with duplication of effort and lack of coordination with other intelligence providers and consumers. Focusing resources on a smaller number of intelligence providers would increase the impact of those resources.”

At a time when the American people are stretching to more with less and the federal budget deficit is soaring out of control, this Committee has an obligation to ensure taxpayer money for national security is being used in the wisest and best manner possible to ensure our nation's safety. Committee Members have a fiduciary responsibility to stand up for the Committee's authorities. The Majority, however, voted to accept this attempt to shift and hide NDIC funding and continue to shirk responsibility for Member pet projects.

Detainees

This bill fails entirely to address the critical issue of the disposition of the detainees currently held at Guantanamo Bay in the wake of the President's unilateral decision to close the facility, before reviewing the relevant facts and options and with no plan. We believe that the security of the American people must come first. The Majority blocked an amendment, offered by Congressman Roy Blunt, which would have prohibited the use of intelligence funds to foreign countries in exchange for accepting newly relocated Guantanamo detainees. This issue must be handled transparently—secret intelligence funds should not be used as a slush fund to pay foreign countries to relieve the United States of its responsibilities.

Despite its willingness to secretly pay foreign nations potentially significant amounts of taxpayer dollars to take detainees, the Majority apparently believes that these detainees are still dangerous, voting against an amendment offered by Congressman Mike Rogers to clarify the record on the issue by preventing the Administration from paying foreign countries to conduct surveillance on or monitor newly released detainees. The Majority apparently agrees that these newly released detainees need to be monitored, but does not believe they pose a sufficient threat to prevent them from being released in the first place.

The Majority also rejected an amendment, offered by Congresswoman Sue Myrick, which would have prevented intelligence dollars from being spent to bring Guantanamo detainees into the United States, despite clear bipartisan opposition in the House and among the American people to bringing dangerous terrorists into the United States. Instead, the Majority adopted a watered-down substitute that withholds money until the President submits a “plan” for these Guantanamo detainees.

Hastily drafted despite delays in the Committee's markup, the substitute amendment requires the “plan” to be submitted to the Congressional defense committees rather than this Committee, despite later Majority criticism of a Republican amendment on the ground that such a provision would cause a sequential referral. In addition, the watered down substitute would have limited effect, restricting funding only to the Director of National Intelligence and not to individual agencies in the intelligence community. The Majority is apparently comfortable allowing the Administration to put down whatever it likes on paper, call it a “plan” for dealing with detainees, and spend money to send these terrorists virtually anywhere from Palau to Peoria. We are not satisfied by half measures. The President and the Majority must more meaningfully address the “problem” of Guantanamo Bay—caused by the premature decision to close the facility—head on.

The Committee agreed to two amendments offered by Ranking Member Hoekstra to require the intelligence community to produce an unclassified summary of the threat posed by the Uighurs at Guantanamo and an unclassified summary on the recidivism of Guantanamo detainees repatriated or released to third countries over the years, although we are disappointed that only a few members of the Majority supported these amendments. These amendments will provide greater transparency and clarity to the public debate over these detainees. The American people deserve to know exactly what kind of people are being held at Guantanamo and exactly what kind of threats we will all face if these detainees are released, brought to this country for trial, or ultimately inserted into the federal prison system.

Failure to protect intelligence community personnel

This bill also contains a provision that we believe will unnecessarily expose intelligence personnel to risk. Section 416 of this bill requires the Central Intelligence Agency to videotape interrogations of detainees. This requirement could quickly become a substantial liability for our CIA officers in the field if the President allows them to interrogate suspected terrorists again. These tapes could pose a logistical and security nightmare, and it is clear that the implications of such a requirement have not been fully vetted.³ Officers at remote locations would have to figure out a way to securely store the tapes. If these tapes were ever lost or stolen, they would create tremendous risks. Videotaped interrogations could reveal the identity of our CIA officers—making them and their families a target for retaliation. Tapes could also betray detainees who might choose to cooperate and mark them for death. Of course, images from even a lawful, properly conducted interrogation might provide material for our adversaries to exploit for propaganda purposes.

Congressman Mac Thornberry offered an amendment to strip section 416 out of this bill and protect our CIA officers going forward. Unfortunately, the amendment was defeated in a split partisan vote. This provision must be more carefully addressed going forward.

More broadly, we are concerned at the increasing politicization of career intelligence community personnel merely for carrying out ³The Committee’s investigation with respect to the destruction of previous tapes has suggested potentially significant issues with respect to the destruction of previously created interrogation videotapes. We wish to note the distinction between the need to preserve existing or future videotapes once created and the policy question of whether such tapes should be created in the future.

policies that were authorized by the President and approved and funded by the Congress.

On May 4, 2009, Philip Mudd, a veteran intelligence officer who has worked for the CIA and the FBI, was nominated to be Under Secretary for Intelligence and Analysis for the Department of Homeland Security. However, on June 5, 2009, Mudd withdrew his nomination because of worries that attacks by Senate Democrats over his work on anti-terror programs would be a “distraction” to the Obama administration. Last November, former CIA officer John Brennan withdrew from consideration to be appointed the CIA Director for the same reason.

We are concerned that highly qualified intelligence officers are becoming pawns in a political game which has caused the careers of some extremely talented intelligence officers, like Mudd and Brennan, to hit a brick wall. These officers are being punished not for wrongdoing but for their success in administering innovative anti-terrorist programs that kept our nation safe from terrorist attack over the last seven years.

It is time to stop this assault on our intelligence community. This is not just wrong, it’s dangerous. There are many dire threats facing our nation from radical jihadists, WMD proliferation, the global economic situation, and many regional issues. America needs an intelligence corps that is prepared to take manageable risks without fear of being undercut by changing political moods. Using intelligence officers as pawns in political games will dissuade our best and brightest intelligence officers from serving in controversial and high-risk environments.

THE BILL CONTAINS SIGNIFICANT SUBSTANTIVE FLAWS

The base bill hastily drafted by the Majority contains several operative provisions that significantly concern us, and equally as many that are poorly researched, of questionable need or have unknown implications. Many of the new provisions reflect the fact that this bill was thrown together in a few days time and is largely cobbled from ODNI proposals that have not been thoroughly considered, and reversals on old issues that were resolved on a bipartisan basis during negotiations on the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act (IRTPA).

Management issues

The base bill was improved by two Republican initiatives on key management issues. One Republican amendment, offered by Congressman John Kline, requires the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) to submit an updated charter to Congress within 90 days of enactment of the bill. The NRO’s existing charter was adopted in 1965 and has not been updated in the forty plus years since that time and no longer reflects the organizational, functional and operational realities of today’s NRO. For example, from a practical perspective, neither the ODNI nor the current DOD acquisition guidelines existed when the current charter was written. This amendment would require the NRO and DOD to finalize and submit a new charter, which we understand has been in the drafting process for quite some time. The amendment was intended to ensure that the NRO’s current organizational structure and reporting chains are reflected in the charter, as well as the modern day functional duties of NRO.

Another Republican amendment offered by Congressman Mike Conaway contained a sense of Congress that reaching auditability for all intelligence community elements should be a priority for the DNI. This is intended to put the IC on notice that it is critically necessary to reach and maintain a level of auditability for all elements of the community and to make certain that the DNI takes a leadership role in ensuring this happens. The amendment also requires the DNI to complete a review to determine specifically where the office is in this process, and to come up with a measurable time frame for reaching a point where the entire IC can be audited. It is essential that the DNI maintains strong financial management and business systems that allow for comprehensive auditing, in order to improve financial management government-wide. The American taxpayers should be assured that we hold government agencies to the same high standards as we do publicly traded companies. These two Republican amendments significantly improve the bill from management and accountability standpoint.

Inspector General of the Intelligence Community

We have significant concerns with Section 406 of the bill, which would create a new Inspector General of the Intelligence Community. While we do not oppose either enhanced oversight of the intelligence community or a capability to review cross-cutting issues within the intelligence community, we are concerned that this provision duplicates efforts of Department and Agency inspectors general, is unnecessarily complex and unwieldy, and threatens to further grow the size and bureaucracy of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence. For example, the bill would make various changes that would subject the National Security Agency to the jurisdiction of not one, but three statutory inspectors general. (Department of Defense, Inspector General of the Intelligence Community, and National Security Agency). Moreover, the Committee's experience has been that increasing size of the bureaucracy has in some cases delayed work on important investigations. This provision can only make the problem worse and further hamper the timeliness of review by the Committee.

General Accounting Office

Section 335 of the bill would require the DNI to provide access for GAO employees to all information that the Comptroller General of the GAO deems necessary to conduct an investigation that is requested by one of the intelligence committees. It is unclear why the Majority believes this broad expansion is even necessary. The elements of the intelligence community all currently have Inspectors General that are able to perform the investigative and auditory functions sought here, while limiting the number of persons that have access to sensitive intelligence information. Moreover, this Committee is charged with oversight of IC programs, and we find it surprising that the Majority is willing to outsource that oversight responsibility. That the Majority is incapable or unwilling to perform the Committee's oversight function is not a sufficient reason to break from a longstanding, carefully structured oversight process designed to balance congressional oversight needs with the Executive's need to protect sensitive information. This provision dangerously subordinates the DNI's responsibility to protect the Nation's most sensitive national security information to an entity responsible for performing audits at Congress' behest.

The provision also lacks any restriction governing the handling of classified information by the GAO—which is not subject to the detailed Rules of the House or the Committee on such matters—and the use and distribution of GAO products. As drafted, the GAO will have access to the most sensitive national security information, and there is no restriction on how they may use that information, who may be designated to receive it and how it may be distributed—especially after the information is incorporated into a GAO product or report. Under the House Rules, this Committee has jurisdiction over sources and methods, and nothing in this provision would prevent the GAO from distributing sensitive sources and methods material beyond this Committee. Aside from the institutional interests that the Majority should be more concerned with protecting, the potential for sensitive information to be inadvertently or intentionally disclosed greatly and dangerously increases with this provision included in the bill.

Less flexibility and more bureaucracy for the intelligence community

The bill also contains several provisions that will hamper the flexibility of community personnel. It will require for the first time Senate confirmation of the National Security Agency Director, NSA General Counsel, and the Director of the National Reconnaissance Office. These positions have traditionally not required Senate confirmation and have been filled by career intelligence professionals. Despite the 9/11 Commission's recommendation that we minimize as much as possible the disruption of national security policymaking by accelerating the process for national security appointments, the Majority seeks to instead add more politics and more delay into the process by requiring additional key intelligence positions to be subject to lengthy, politicized Senate confirmation process. It is unclear how subjecting career intelligence employees to these processes or replacing them in favor of partisan political appointments will enhance our ability to respond to catastrophic terrorist attacks like 9/11.

The bill also adds another layer of bureaucracy to NSA by creating a new Associate Director position that will duplicate oversight responsibilities already charged to the General Counsel. If there are concerns with the way NSA's Office of the General Counsel has handled matters in the past, creating another layer in the bureaucracy at an additional cost to the taxpayers is not the best way to address those concerns.

Further hampering the IC is the Majority's unexplained decision to mandate personnel practices in the Defense Department that are opposed by the current Administration. Section 304 of the bill terminates DOD's use of the Defense Civilian Intelligence Personnel System or "pay for performance" as the system is more familiarly known. The rationale for this provision is not transparent. DOD is implementing DCIPS to bring DOD intelligence personnel in line with the rest of the IC. While we are aware of some concerns with respect to compensation reform at the CIA, we believe that the concept has generally worked at DOD. The Administration has already responded to the Majority's concerns about pay for performance earlier this month after delaying implementation and conducting a review following a request from the Chairman. Suspension of DCIPS will leave Intelligence employees working side by side under different systems and different terms of employment.

Burdensome reports and Congressionally Directed Actions

We are once again troubled by the proliferation of reports that are required of the intelligence community. At least 41 new reports and Congressionally Directed Actions are mandated in the bill and classified annex, while only five statutorily required reports are removed.

In order for the House and Senate intelligence committees to do their job on behalf of Congress and the American people, the Committees must have access to the necessary information. Requiring that an agency produce a periodic report on certain activities is sometimes the most efficient way to obtain that information. But at other times, a briefing or a simple letter can serve just as well. Too often, requiring a new report is used as a substitute for reading, studying, and learning from what has already been provided. Many times, such a requirement is used to convey interest in a topic or as a fall-back position to a thwarted legislative provision.

The burden of researching, writing, approving, and transmitting this volume of reports to Congress, strains the resources of the intelligence community. If the congressional Committees were to carefully read and study each one, it would also strain the Committee's resources. Unfortunately, these reports frequently become a paper shuffling exercise for both branches, rather than a serious, substantive exchange of information needed for proper oversight and decisions.

We believe that the Committee should be much more judicious in the reports it requires and that it should demand high quality responses to those requests. The growing demand for little read or used mounds of paper does not benefit either branch.

Modifications to provisions of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act

Several provisions of the bill change elements of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act (IRTPA) enacted after exhaustive bipartisan discussion and consideration. With no apparent rationale, the Majority has also loosened the agreed upon threshold that is required for the IC to request a reprogramming of funds that were directed by Congress to be used in specific ways. Currently, the IC may request a reprogramming of funds when there is need based on "unforeseen requirements." Under the standard just adopted by the Majority, the IC may request reprogramming based on an emergent need, improved program effectiveness or an increase in efficiency. In effect, this significant change would allow reprogrammings whenever the Executive Branch seeks to do so with only the thinnest of justifications. It is unclear why the Majority would water down our institutional interests by giving up control and oversight of IC spending.

Several provisions are also inconsistent with the bipartisan IRTPA agreement that became law not quite five years ago, and the reason for the changes are not transparent. The DNI requested that Agencies be mandated to allow non-reimbursable detailees to serve at ODNI for an extended period, and the Majority did so without an appropriate review of whether it was truly needed, or what the repercussions may be. Similarly, the bill makes changes to the duties of the program manager for the Information Sharing Environment whose responsibilities were set forth in IRTPA. Without explanation, the Majority decided to open up issues long ago resolved where there is no demonstrated need to do so. Like many of the IRTPA provisions, these provisions were the subject of detailed Committee consideration and in-depth discussions in 2004 and ill-considered changes at the behest of the ODNI whose authorities were so carefully balanced in that bill without full consideration for the implications is ill-advised.

Additional substantive concerns

The bill also contains additional provisions that do not appear to have been well-thought through or vetted, some submitted by the Administration two days before the legislative package was drafted and incorporated verbatim in the bill. While these provisions may appear technical on the surface, they could have significant substantive implications and do not appear to have been studied or justified. It is simply not possible to thoroughly study and contemplate the intent and implications of these provisions in just a couple of days. Rather than spending the time to consider these provisions, the Majority added them to this bill.

Notably, several education and scholarship programs are made permanent without any specific demonstration of their effectiveness and impact from the IC. While these programs may have merit, it does not make sense to permanently authorize certain pilot programs merely because the IC asks for them. The Committee has not received any information indicating how these programs have worked and why they should be made permanent. To blindly enact these programs does a disservice to the Committee's important oversight role.

Section 302 of the bill also permits the DNI to temporarily appoint certain personnel from other IC agencies to fill vacancies of presidentially appointed or Senate confirmed positions. This is another provision that the Committee received from the Administration days before it was included in the bill. ODNI indicated it recently had trouble filling a specialized Senate confirmed position on a temporary basis necessitating this provision. Instead of considering whether the ODNI's issue may be addressed in other ways, the Majority accepted most of the Administration's language on this provision and the implications of greatly expanding the DNI's authority to fill critical positions previously subject to confirmation remain unknown.

Section 413 allows CIA contractors to appeal disputes to the Armed Services contracting appeals board. The provision also appeared in the bill just days after the Administration requested the provision be included in this year's authorization bill. The provision would amend current law to permit a CIA contracting officer to appeal a contracting decision to the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals or the Civilian Board of Contract Appeals. Until recently, the law provided for appeal to both boards and was only recently amended to permit appeal to the Civilian Board only. We are unaware of any consideration given to the ramifications of expanding this jurisdiction or even if the reasoning behind why the law was recently amended has been reviewed.

The bill contains provisions requested by the DNI that would protect from misuse of the DNI seal. We have no information from the DNI that misuse of the seal is a significant problem they have encountered. This provision was also added to the bill without any consideration of its necessity. Frankly, we find it surprising that a provision like this would receive any attention in a time where the IC is facing much more pressing and serious issues that the Committee needs to address, particularly when the Community has not had an authorization bill in several years.

Section 502 of the bill extends the National Commission for the Review of the Research and Development Programs of the intelligence community. Again, the Committee has not been provided with a rationale for reauthorizing this Commission and the Majority has not articulated any reason to reauthorize a Commission whose previous authorization expired before the Committee ever met.

Section 503 of the bill requires the DNI to conduct a classification review of materials in the possession of the intelligence communities that are at least twenty-five years old and were provided to the Committee by the Executive Branch. This provision appeared in the draft bill in the days before Committee consideration without explanation and fails to recognize that the Executive Branch already conducts classification reviews of such material pursuant to its original classification authorities. We believe that our intelligence professionals could better spend their time on a variety of matters that do not involve doing duplicative classification reviews. Our recommendation on a better method for minimizing the mounds of paper that are put into the Committee's storage would be to stop propounding dozens of new reporting requirements to the IC each time we pass an authorization bill.

Conclusion

In conclusion, we are disappointed that substantial bipartisan agreement on this year's classified Schedule of Authorizations and in the legislative provisions of last year's bill have been put aside, apparently to turn this critical national security bill into a partisan messaging tool and a vehicle in many cases for questionable provisions to advance partisan policy initiatives or rubber stamp the requests of the Administration, ignoring other critical substantive issues. We hope that these concerns can be addressed as the bill moves forward in the legislative process, but must urge our colleagues to oppose it in its current form.

ADDITIONAL VIEWS

During committee consideration of the bill H.R. 2701, I indicated that I had additional questions on portions of the classified annex and was not yet prepared to vote to approve the Schedule of Authorizations. As a result, I requested that I be recorded as voting present on the question of whether to report the bill favorably to the House.

I have subsequently received answers to my questions. Had I known those answers at the time of the mark-up, I would have voted to report the bill favorably.
