

V. On What Issues Will EPA Be Soliciting Input?

Stakeholders repeatedly have identified three issues: hazardous waste determination, satellite accumulation, and treatment in satellite accumulation areas.

Hazardous Waste Determination:

Currently, you must make a hazardous waste determination at the "point of generation" of a waste.

1. When should the hazardous waste determination be made in a laboratory setting?
2. What training is needed for lab personnel concerning hazardous waste determinations (e.g., full RCRA training or training that is made specific to chemical management duties)?
3. How should waste be labeled so it can be appropriately managed as hazardous waste (e.g., the words "hazardous waste" or a detailed chemical description)?
4. Where should the hazardous waste determination be made (e.g., on the bench or in the 90 to 180 day storage area)?

Satellite Accumulation Area (SAA) Accumulation Time: If more than 55 gallons of hazardous waste or more than 1 quart of acute hazardous waste is accumulated at a SAA, the excess must be removed within three days.

1. How should these requirements be applied in a laboratory context?
2. How often do laboratories accumulate more than 55 gallons of waste in their SAA?
3. What, if any, difficulties do environmental health and safety personnel have responding to waste pick-up calls, e.g., within the three day time limit?
4. How would a longer time-frame for removal impact the cost of waste management and the ability to protect human health and the environment?

Treatment in SAAs: We have heard from numerous stakeholders that they would like to perform certain types of treatment.

1. What types of treatment, other than neutralization, are laboratory personnel currently performing or would like to perform?
2. What would be the benefits of the desired types of treatment?

Other Issues: The Agency also solicits your thoughts on other issues specific to research and academic laboratories. In reviewing issues raised by hazardous waste identification and management in laboratories, we will particularly focus on the way laboratories operate, and we will also take into account factors such as regulatory burden, cost, and protection of human health and the environment.
