29 CFR Parts 1910, 1915 and 1926

RIN 1218–AB53

Consolidation of Repetitive Provisions; Technical Amendments

AGENCY: Occupational Safety and Health Administration, Department of Labor.

ACTION: Final rule; technical amendments and recodifications.

SUMMARY: As part of a line-by-line review of its standards, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) is consolidating repetitious provisions, removing duplicative pages, making corrections, and clarifying and reorganizing various sections of its standards in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR). This action is being taken in response to a Presidential initiative begun in March 1995 to streamline Federal regulatory efforts. In addition, OSHA is removing certain fire protection standards from the Safety and Health Regulations for Construction that had inadvertently been identified as applicable to construction work. The document being published today does not make any changes to the substantive requirements of the standards.

EFFECTIVE DATE: June 30, 1996.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

In March 1995, the President directed Federal agencies to undertake a line-by-line review of their rules and regulations to determine where they could be simplified or clarified. OSHA initiated such a review and, as a result, completed a document on May 31, 1995, entitled "OSHA's Regulatory Reform Initiatives." That document delineated those rules and regulations that could be deleted or revised to improve compliance by employers and, consequently, provide enhanced occupational safety and health protection to employees. This regulatory improvement process involves revocation of outdated and obsolete provisions, consolidation of repetitious provisions, and clarification of ambiguous requirements.

The Agency began the process by issuing a final rule in the Federal Register on March 7, 1996 (61 FR 9228), which addressed minor clarifications, corrections, and technical amendments to OSHA standards. This notice is the second in a series of actions and is directed at consolidating repetitious provisions. More specifically, instead of repeating identical regulatory text in all three parts of the OSHA standards—general industry, shipyard employment, and construction standards (parts 1910, 1915, and 1926, respectively), OSHA will print the regulatory text that is common to all industries in its part 1910 volumes. OSHA has already accomplished this for its agricultural standards, which are codified in 29 CFR Part 1928, by publishing a Federal Register notice [61 FR 9228; March 7, 1996]. Appropriate references will be made in the construction and shipyard employment parts of the CFR to direct employers to the appropriate section of the part 1910 volumes.

To assist employers and employees in the construction industry who prefer to have a single source that includes all of the standards that apply to their work, OSHA will publish a booklet in the near future that will contain all of the standards applicable to the construction industry.

The Agency plans to undertake a number of additional regulatory reform initiatives. For example, OSHA is developing a proposed rule, which will be subject to public notice and comment, to make substantive changes in various standards to diminish regulatory burdens without reducing worker protections. OSHA also intends to take actions to reduce paperwork burdens, rewrite standards in "plain English," and simplify its standards.

II. Summary and Explanation of the Changes

In 1993, OSHA revised its part 1915 (shipyard) and part 1926 (construction) standards in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) by adding to part 1915 and part 1926, respectively, those standards applicable to shipyards or construction that had formerly only been printed in part 1910 of the CFR. The added standards included their own part 1915 and part 1926 designations and duplicated all of the regulatory text. This nearly doubled the number of CFR pages in part 1926 and added many CFR pages to part 1915 (see 58 FR 35076; June 30, 1993, and 58 FR 35512; July 1, 1993). The majority of the standards that were duplicated were standards relating to occupational health hazards. Most of the general industry standards incorporated through this action had long been applied to construction and shipyard employments, with only a few exceptions.

OSHA has found that printing the identical rules in three separate parts of its rules and regulations unnecessarily lengthens the CFR. As it eliminates these duplications, OSHA will provide taxpayers with a cost savings by reducing the number of pages in its CFR parts.

Most of the changes being made occur in subpart Z of parts 1910, 1915 and 1926. For example, many of the occupational health standards in subpart Z of the general industry standards (part 1910) apply to both shipyard employment (part 1915) and the construction industry (part 1926). Rather than printing subpart Z standards that applied to more than one industry in one place, OSHA printed the same standards in each of the three parts of its CFR. This has caused confusion when, for example, a construction employer who has projects in construction and general industry has employees who are exposed to a given air contaminant that is regulated both in subpart Z of the construction standards (part 1926) and in subpart Z of the general industry standards (part 1910). In such a case, an employer could mistakenly believe that two different permissible exposure limits apply to the same contaminant, since subpart Z of the construction standards and subpart Z of the general industry standards (part 1910) both have a limit for the contaminant. In this document, OSHA is eliminating such duplicative standards and replacing them with cross references to eliminate any possible confusion and to reduce the volume of the rules.

OSHA is eliminating duplicate health standards from the shipyard (part 1915) and construction (part 1926) parts of the CFR and is replacing them with cross references to the identical text in subpart Z of part 1910. This action does not in any way change the burden on employers or lessen employee protection because the same standards will continue to apply to shipyard employment and the construction industry.

For example, the requirements to protect workers from arsenic exposure in shipyards and construction are identical to those applying to general industry. Consequently, the regulatory text in § 1915.1018, the arsenic standard applying to shipyards, and the requirements in § 1926.1118, the arsenic standard applying to construction, are identical to the regulatory text in § 1910.1018, the arsenic standard in general industry.

The technical amendments issued today will retain the section number and heading for the arsenic standard in the shipyard standards (§ 1915.1018, Inorganic arsenic) and in the construction standards (§ 1926.1118, Inorganic arsenic) to remind employers searching for them of their new location, but will replace the duplicated regulatory text with a simple cross reference stating, "Note: The requirements applicable to construction work under this section are identical to those set forth at 29 CFR 1910.1018."

Where a health standard in subpart Z of the general industry standards (1910) differs from the standard addressing the same hazard in shipyard employment or in the construction industry, the entire text of that health standard will remain in the shipyard and construction standards. In other words, where OSHA has developed a health standard for shipyards or construction that differs substantially from the general industry standard for the same hazard, the industry-specific standard will remain in the part of the CFR devoted to that industry. For example, in the case of cadmium, the regulatory text differs for general industry and construction; therefore, the complete regulatory text is printed both at § 1910.1017 and at 1926.1127, i.e., in the general industry and construction parts, respectively. However, the shipyard standard for cadmium, § 1915.1017, is identical to the general industry cadmium standard, § 1910.1017. The duplicative regulatory text is being deleted from part 1915 and replaced with an appropriate cross reference to § 1910.1017. Similarly, appendices A to F of the standard are identical for all three parts. Therefore, the duplicative appendices are being deleted from part 1915 (shipyards) and part 1926 (construction). These actions avoid the need to reprint 185 duplicative CFR pages.

Another change being made involves moving two standards currently in subpart C of the general industry standards (part 1910) to subpart Z of those standards in an effort to locate virtually all of OSHA's health standards in one subpart and in one volume of the CFR. OSHA is redesignating § 1910.20 (Access to employee exposure and medical records) as § 1910.1020 and § 1910.96 (Ionizing radiation) as § 1910.1096. This will place virtually all of OSHA's general industry health standards in subpart Z of part 1910.

Another change applies to OSHA's Commercial Diving Standard, which is currently codified both in the general industry and the construction standards. OSHA has received requests from industry representatives to locate the diving standard in one location, preferably in part 1910 (general industry). Most diving contractors operate in all three industry areas (i.e., general industry, construction, and maritime), moving from one industry to another to perform their work. The Association of Diving Contractors (ADC) members and others, such as Seaward Marine Services, Inc., one of the largest diving companies in the Nation, have asked OSHA to maintain the requirements for commercial diving in part 1910 only. The diving industry reports that multiple diving standards are causing confusion in the issuance of diving contract specifications. The Diving Standards in Subpart Y of the construction standards are identical to the Diving Standards in Subpart T of the general industry standards. Rather than repeating the standards in both parts, OSHA is removing the regulatory text in its entirety from the construction standards and replacing that text with a cross reference to the Diving Standard in Subpart T of the general industry standards.

Also, in the shipyard employment standards, OSHA is redesignating § 1915.1120—Access to employee exposure and medical records, as § 1915.1020. The purpose of this change is, as much as possible, to keep the section number designations—in this case .1020—the same for each part if a standard addressing the same topic and having the same name is codified both in the general industry and shipyard standards. OSHA is unable to follow this numbering scheme in the case of the construction standards, however, because vacant section numbers are not available in the construction industry CFR volume.

In addition, in the 1993 recodification process described earlier, OSHA identified some provisions from its standards in Subpart L of Part 1910 Fire Protection and Prevention (§ 1910.156 to 1910.165) as applicable to the construction industry. However, on further examination, this was an incorrect identification because OSHA's general industry standards for Subpart L state at § 1910.155 Scope, application and definitions applicable to this subpart:

(b) Application. This subpart applies to all employments except for maritime, construction, and agriculture.

This final rule corrects this misidentification by removing the text of §§ 1926.97, 1926.98; 1926.150(c)(1)(xi) to (c)(1)(xiv); and 1926.156 through 1926.159, all of which were based on requirements in §§ 1910.156 to 1910.165.

Finally, as stated in the 1993 recodification, OSHA has made every effort to identify those standards published in part 1910, General Industry, which are most likely to be applicable to shipyard employment and construction work. OSHA notes, however, that other standards published in part 1910 may, under some circumstances, also be applicable.

III. Regulatory Flexibility Certification

The Regulatory Flexibility Act of 1980 (5 U.S.C. 601 et seq.), as amended, requires that the Agency examine regulatory actions to determine if they would have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. The modifications being made in this final rule do not increase or reduce the regulatory burden on any employer, large or small. For that reason, the Agency hereby certifies that these changes will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities.

IV. Exemption From Notice and Comment Procedures

OSHA finds that there is good cause not to follow procedures for public notice and comment set forth in section 6(b) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (29 U.S.C. 655 (b)) or under section 4 of the Administrative Procedure Act (5 U.S.C. 553). Notice is unnecessary pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 553 (b)(3)(B) because these actions are technical amendments that do not affect the substantive requirements or coverage of the standards themselves. This removal of duplicative provisions and reorganization of standards within the CFR does not modify or revoke existing rights or obligations, nor does it establish new ones.

For the same reasons, OSHA also finds that, in accordance with 29 CFR 1911.5, good cause exists for dispensing with the public notice and comment procedures prescribed in section 6(b) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

OSHA also finds for the same reasons that there is good cause for an effective date of less than 30 days after publication pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 553(d) and because the June 30, 1996, effective date will permit these changes to be reflected in the 1996 volumes of 29 CFR.

33 CFR Part 117

[CGD5-95-084]

RIN 2115-AE47

Drawbridge Operation Regulations; Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, Sunset Beach, NC

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DOT.

ACTION: Final rule.

SUMMARY: At the request of the North Carolina Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard is changing the regulations that govern the operation of the drawbridge across the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, mile 337.9, at Sunset Beach, North Carolina, by extending the hours on weekends and holidays during the summer months during which the bridge may open only on the hour. This rule is intended to provide regularly scheduled drawbridge openings to help reduce motor vehicle traffic delays and congestion on the roads and highways linked by this drawbridge while providing for the reasonable needs of navigation.

EFFECTIVE DATE: This rule is effective on July 22, 1996.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Ann B. Deaton, Bridge Administrator, Fifth Coast Guard District, at (804) 398-6222.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Regulatory History

On January 23, 1996, the Coast Guard published a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM) entitled "Drawbridge Operation Regulations; Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway, Sunset Beach, North Carolina" in the Federal Register (61 FR 1725). In addition to publishing the NPRM, the Coast Guard also announced the proposed changes in Public Notice 5-881. The comment period ended March 8, 1996. One comment was received. A public hearing was not requested and one was not held.

Background and Purpose

The Sunset Beach drawbridge crosses the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway at mile 337.9. The proposed changes were requested by the North Carolina Department of Transportation on behalf of the Town of Sunset Beach in order to alleviate delays to vehicle traffic caused by opening of the draw for passage of recreational vessels after 7 p.m. on the weekends and holidays.

Discussion of Comments and Changes

The NPRM proposed changes to 33 CFR 117.821(b)(6), regulations governing operation of a drawbridge across the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway at Sunset Beach, North Carolina. The proposed changes include extending the hours on weekends and holidays to include 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. during the summer months when the bridge may open only on the hour.

One comment was received on the proposed change to 33 CFR 117.821(b)(6) from a recreational boater opposing the extension of the hourly openings during the weekends and holidays. The recreational boater stated that extending the hourly openings was an unreasonable burden to pleasure boaters and was particularly bad for those who are out on the water returning late in the day. He also stated that the present hourly openings of the bridge during weekends was an unreasonable burden to pleasure boats, and that North Carolina should consider increasing the number of openings for all its regulated bridges. The Coast Guard does not agree. All presently regulated bridges in North Carolina crossing the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway have schedules which take into consideration the highway traffic volumes at those particular locations, keeping in mind the steady flow of vessel traffic on this waterway during the summer months. With respect to Sunset Beach, the North Carolina Department of Transportation has advised the Coast Guard that maintaining the existing hourly opening restrictions and extending them by hours in the evenings on the weekends and Federal holidays is critical in order to avoid severe traffic congestion to and from the island. Vehicular traffic is at its highest peak on the island during the summer season, and, in particular, on weekends and holidays. This increase in vehicular traffic is due to vacationers and residents of surrounding communities coming to Sunset Beach to enjoy the ocean and beaches. Those from the surrounding communities usually do not leave the island until sunset which extends the evening hours that SR 1172 is congested with cars. The increase in traffic also places a strain on the local streets in the Town of Sunset Beach. The need to free up traffic congestion coming from the island supports the request to extend hourly openings on weekends and holidays. Recreational boaters can plan their transits around the hourly schedule, as they do now. After 9 p.m., the drawbridge will revert back to opening on demand, so boaters may plan to
