

With spring having come to our capital and with Easter upon us, I would like to make part of our RECORD Governor Coleman's Essay of April 5, 1997, "Reflections on Easter and Spring."

REFLECTIONS ON EASTER AND SPRING

(By Peter Tali Coleman)

Yesterday I came home to our family residence here in Hawaii after a stay at Queen's Hospital over the Easter holidays. While it's never fun to be in the hospital, this Easter was memorable because all our family gathered to be here with Nora and me in a big family lounge that the hospital set aside for us.

As I said the grace before we began our Easter meal, I could not help but think of the meaning of Easter and Spring, since the first day of Spring this year came only a few days before Palm Sunday, the traditional beginning of our Easter season after the long winter Lent.

Spring and Easter are about the renewal of life and new beginnings. Our Lord perished on the Cross for our sins, but was resurrected to give all of us hope for the future and a better life in eternity. So, too, does Mother nature awaken each Spring to begin a new cycle of life and growth. On the Mainland, the last of the snow melts away, the flowers begin to bloom and land is green again. Here in the Pacific where it's always green, the life-sustaining rains give way to the drier and warmer times of spring and summer and we go about all the chores we had put aside until better weather.

I could not help but think of family in the same way I think of Spring and Easter when I saw all of our family members on Easter, especially the little grandchildren and great grandchildren, great nieces and nephews, all with their wide eyes of expectation and excitement with Easter eggs and candy and Easter baskets, and bunnies and chicks and all the joys and traditions that go with a holiday which brings families together everywhere in the Christian world.

The presence of the little children is God's way of bringing renewal and new beginnings to our families. When we look out and see those bright and shining faces, eager to learn about the world around them and beyond, we can take comfort in knowing that this world will be in good hands when their generation takes over. We can find peace in knowing that when our own time comes to join our Lord, if we have done our job on earth, we will have our families to carry on and through them we will continue to live, for our very blood flows through their veins and their children's veins in a cycle which forever will renew itself.

My own life has been dedicated to service to the people and devotion to my family. Although my days of public service now have come to a close, the Samoan people and all the peoples of the Pacific Islands I have been privileged to know in my work and travels remain in my thoughts as a new generation of leaders and servants seeks to find a true path to renewal and new beginnings for our strong but fragile societies and cultures at the dawn of a new century and a new millennium.

God has allowed me to see so much dramatic change through the course of this century. As amazing as it seems, the Samoa of my youth no doubt much more resembled the Samoa of most of the millennium which preceded it than it does the Samoa of today, which is poised to enter the 21st century. The pace of change in this century about to close has been dramatic. As a child in Samoa after World War I, I could not begin to comprehend or imagine the things we take for granted today, from modern medicine to computers to the Hubble Space Telescope. Nor can I begin to imagine now what the next century will bring.

Whether I will be here to witness the beginning of the next millennium and new beginnings it will prompt is in God's hands. But wherever I may be and whatever advances science and industry may bring, I know that the futures will be bright if we remain true to our values. Those values are love of God, devotion to family, protection of culture, and courtesy and respect towards one another.

For myself, it counts little what I may have achieved here on earth in 55 years of government service through war and peace. My failures were my own and my successes were the result of all the good colleagues and friends around me. But, for all of us, no matter what our calling in life, our truest legacies are the families which are asked to carry on when we are gone.

So, while my days in public service may be finished, I have come home now to be with my family. They bring me joy and inspiration as I think about the future. They are all here now and I take great comfort in their presence. They have come to be with Nora and me from near and far: from the Mainland to Saipan to our beloved Samoa. And because they are so scattered, I have agreed to a consensus of my family's wishes that I should lie in rest in Hawaii. But in so doing, they have assented to my wish that when the last of my children's children shall have joined me in heaven, that my final resting place shall be in the soil of my birth.

For now, when I think of spring and think of Easter, I thank God I have been given one more opportunity to reflect on life's renewal and new beginnings, and the love of family which bursts forth like the flowers of Spring. As the Easter season now ends and we move about in our Spring tasks, may God bless you and your families, too.

125TH ANNIVERSARY OF SHORTER COLLEGE

HON. BOB BARR

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 1, 1998

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, in Rome Georgia stands a small liberal arts college that lives up to the true tradition of educational excellence: love of family, and love of God, combined with a commitment to community values and an educational experience that is everlasting.

The school that I speak of is Shorter College, now celebrating its 125th Anniversary. Mr. Speaker this is a critical period in American history; time when the value of morals, faith in God, and a sound education can no longer be taken for granted but are more important than ever.

Through this period of moral decline, Shorter has remained true to the values of its founder, Rome Baptist Church Pastor Luther Rice Gwaltney.

I am not alone in recognizing the excellence of Shorter College. For the second year in a row, Shorter has been listed in the "Student Guide to America's 100 Best College Buys." Moreover, Shorter is a member of the National Association of Schools of Music. The devotion of Shorter to the teaching of music cannot be overstated. Today, many more children rush home from school to play on their computers than on their pianos. Yet, the language of music is universal and can be found in every nation around the world and bears a direct relationship to the progress of its culture.

In honor of Pastor Gwaltney and Alfred and Martha Shorter for whom the college is named, I congratulate Shorter on its first 125 years and wish it many many more.

ETHICS REFORM

HON. LEE H. HAMILTON

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 1, 1998

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert my Washington Report for Wednesday, April 1, 1998 into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

HOUSE ETHICS REFORM

Many Americans believe that Members of Congress have low ethics standards and that the overall level of ethics and honesty in politics has been falling over the years. Although most observers of Congress would say the opposite, the public remains unconvinced and broadly dissatisfied with ethics standards of Members.

Congressional ethics is one area where I have seen a great amount of changes since I have been in Congress. I've seen periods of enormous progress, but also, in recent years, have seen the entire process bog down in intense partisanship. Clearly we need to give greater attention to improving House ethics.

HISTORY OF HOUSE ETHICS

The House has the responsibility under the Constitution to police its membership, as Article I authorizes each house of Congress to "punish its Members for disorderly behavior and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a Member". This is an important responsibility because our system of representative democracy depends upon the confidence of the people in the integrity of their elected representatives.

The first disciplinary action against a Member was in 1798, when a vote to expel a Member for spitting on another narrowly failed. From then until the late 1960s, when the House became more active in ethics reform, the House took disciplinary action against Members only about thirty times, with the offenses ranging from dueling and treason to inserting obscene material into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Typically the House acted only on the most obvious cases of official wrongdoing, leaving many other transgressions up to the voters to weigh at election time.

When I came to Congress in 1965 there was no House ethics committee and no written code of conduct for Members. Members could accept any gift given by special interests, receive large sums of money at "testimonial dinners", and convert campaign funds to personal use. Members were rarely punished for personal corruption, and it was common for lobbyists to walk around Congress with envelopes of cash in their pockets to hand out to lawmakers. All that changed beginning in the late 1960s, when, prompted by a series of embarrassing scandals, the House created an ethics committee (the Standards of Official Conduct Committee), set up a tough Code of Conduct for Members, and began policing its membership in a more rigorous manner. The Code set up at that time is essentially the one we have today. I was pleased to have been involved in those efforts to improve House ethics.

Yet in recent years the system has fallen on harder times. Starting in the late 1980s, we have seen intense politicization of the ethics process, with Members increasingly using ethics charges against other Members as a way of waging political warfare. House conservatives lodged ethics charges against then-Speaker Jim Wright and pursued them doggedly, leading to his resignation. Last Congress, in what many saw as "payback time", Speaker Gingrich faced extensive legal and ethical charges from House critics, resulting in a reprimand and large fine. Under the intense partisanship, the entire House ethics process almost broke down and a moratorium was placed on new ethics cases.

WHAT'S NEEDED

The House has shown in the past that it is able to mount serious efforts to improve its ethics system. I believe that such an effort is needed now.

First, we need to depoliticize the process. Although this will be difficult to do, given the lingering hard feelings on both sides of the aisle, we need clear signals from the party leaders that bringing frivolous charges against another Member for political purposes will not be tolerated. In addition, the Standards Committee could issue a formal criticism of Members who make such charges. I also believe we need to involve outsiders more in the ethics process to depoliticize it and defuse tensions. For example, the Standards Committee could call upon a panel of private citizens to help investigate charges of misconduct against a Member.

Second, we need to expand our "preventive ethics" efforts. One of the most important roles of the Standards Committee is to try to head off misconduct before it occurs, by providing guidance and advisory opinions for Members about which specific actions would violate House ethics rules. The Committee has recently undertaken some important steps along these lines, by sending ethics notices to every congressional office. Such efforts need to be continued and expanded.

Third, we should simplify and clarify the House ethics rules. Recent changes, for example, have made the House gift rule more than ten pages long, which no one can understand. The Code of Conduct works best when it reflects broad, basic standards of good conduct, with the Committee providing more detailed guidance when specific questions arise. We should also make it clearer that core standards, such as the duty of Members to at all times reflect credit on the House, lie at the heart of the Code, and that our ethics standards are higher than simply whether or not some action was illegal.

Fourth, we need to adopt some needed ethics reforms. The public is rightly concerned about practices allowed under the current House ethics rules which call into question the integrity of the legislative process, such as Members being allowed to accept expensive trips from groups with a direct interest in legislation before Congress. Changes are also needed in our campaign finance system, which the public widely perceives as corrupting.

Fifth, we need to broaden the conception of ethical conduct for Members. Most of the rules in the Code of Conduct deal with financial matters, for example, Members not accepting gifts or converting campaign funds to personal use. But the public is more concerned about a broader range of ethical action—whether Members level with their constituents, whether they keep their promises once in office, and whether they keep their constituents' interests most at heart. Some years ago the House passed a resolution, since technically expired, called the Code of Ethics for Government Service, which did contain broader standards and emphasized that "public office is a public trust." These standards should be added to the Code of Conduct, and the Committee should publicize adherence to these principles.

Finally, we need to improve public understanding of House ethics. As Congress observers note, media coverage of Members is usually spotty unless there is a scandal or wrongdoing to be reported. The vast majority of Members are honest, conscientious, and genuinely trying to address the nation's problems. But the public too often doesn't hear that side. Those who care deeply about the institution of Congress need to not just speak out about its problems but also speak out about what's good about Congress and its Members.

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT J. FOX

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 1, 1998

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to our colleagues' attention one of northern Virginia's outstanding citizens, Robert J. Fox. On April 11, Robert will reach a milestone in his public service career, marking 50 years of federal service in the U.S. Army and the Postal Service.

Robert J. Fox was born on January 16, 1927, in Philadelphia, PA, where he grew up and attended Catholic schools. He entered the Army in March 1945 and served in the Infantry Airborne, reaching the rank of first sergeant by 1949. He served in Germany in the 102d Division and when the 102d Division went home, he stayed on with the 1st Infantry Division.

He continued to reenlist and went to the front lines in Korea with the 7th Infantry Division in 1952. He served 16 months in Korea. Robert was awarded the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters, the Good Conduct Medal with five loops, the WWII American Campaign and Victory Medal, the European-African-Middle Eastern Theater Medal, the Occupation of Germany Medal, Korean Service Medal and the National Defense Medal.

During his military career, he attended 16 different Army schools, worked in Intelligence learning several different languages, and served several more tours in Europe. He was discharged from active duty at Arlington Hall after 20 years of service, but also served two more years in the Army Reserve. He served as assistant to the Master of the Grange in Washington, D.C., for two years. He met and married his wife Jacquelyn Ann in Sperryville, Virginia, where he still lives today.

Robert joined the Post Office Department on April 13, 1968, as a letter carrier. He has served his entire postal career at the Warrenton Post Office in Fauquier County, where he developed a reputation as a dedicated, hardworking employee. He has always shown concern for his customers and the community, making several lifelong friendships.

Robert has been active in the Postal Service's Carrier Alert Program, in which carriers watch out for senior citizens on their route, alerting friends and relatives when something appears wrong. He personally saved the life of an elderly woman on his route when he discovered that she had fallen on the steps inside her home and no one else was around to help her. Without Robert's intervention, she could have laid there for days.

Most notably in his career, Robert has never had an accident as a postal employee. He is a member of the Million Mile Club, which recognizes postal employees who have driven 1,000,000 miles or more without a vehicle accident. He has gone years at a time without using any sick leave and is still one of the most dependable employees in the Warrenton Post Office.

A respected and active member of the community, Robert once spent four years providing free volunteer labor to rebuild the Sperryville Baptist Church. He has two sons, Rev. Joseph Robert Fox, who served as a fighter pilot in the U.S. Marine Corps and is now a minister in the Virginia Beach area, and James Patrick Fox, who resides in California.

Mr. Speaker, Robert Fox is a remarkable man whose contributions to his community and his country as a leader and volunteer have made a difference in people's lives. I know our colleagues join me in honoring his outstanding achievements through his half century of public service.

TRIBUTE TO LT. JOHN REGAN ON THE OCCASION OF HIS RETIREMENT FROM THE CHICAGO POLICE DEPARTMENT

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 1, 1998

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute today to a dedicated police officer who has spent 36 years protecting the lives and property of his fellow citizens, Lieutenant John T. Regan of the Chicago Police Department.

Since 1962, Lieutenant Regan has served the city of Chicago and his community, including many people from my district, as a member of the Chicago Police Department. Most recently, he has worked in the Violent Crimes Office of the Area One Detective Division. On March 5, 1998, however, Lieutenant Regan retired from the police force. His presence will certainly be missed, both by his fellow officers and by the members of the community who he has served diligently for many years.

Mr. Speaker, I salute Lieutenant John T. Regan on his 36 years as a police officer. I would like to extend my very best wishes for continued success and happiness in retirement and in the years to come.

LOCAL PROFILES IN COURAGE

HON. WILLIAM J. COYNE

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, April 1, 1998

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to three men from southwestern Pennsylvania who stood up for what was right.

Over the last 40 years, we have overturned the laws that once upheld race-based segregation and discrimination. This accomplishment should not be underestimated. Unfortunately, the fact of the matter is that while discrimination has been curbed, it has not been eliminated.
